Public officials' holdings in banks a conflict?

by STEVE BROWN

A month-long Herald investigation into the ownership of area banks has revealed that a number of public officials may be involved in conflicts of interest because they own bank stock.

The Herald probe has shown that several elected officials, top administrators and appointed commission members own shares in local banks and have taken official actions that may have benefited their interests.

Officials in Palatine, Arlington Heights, Wheeling, Des Plaines, several school districts and other assorted boards and commissions all hold stock in banks that do business with their respective governmental agencies.

Many of the officials contended that their ownership of bank stock represented no conflict of interest, but the Illinois Revised Statues say that "no person holding any office in this state . . . may in any manner be interested . . . in any contract or the performance of any work in the making or letting of which such officer would be called upon to vote."

The state law indicates that any contract or work approved under these conditions is null and void.

AMONG THE Herald disclosures:

• In Palatine, at least two members of the village board owned stock in the Palatine National Bank in 1971. The bank had requested a zoning variation in order to build a drive-in banking facility. The bank did not get everything that it wanted.

Village officials denied the bank direct access to the intersection of Colfax and Smith streets. But they did finally approve the project.

"Mere ownership of the stock does not constitute a conflict," he said. Moodie added he voted against keeping village funds in Hughes' bank, because that could have been a conflict. Moodie also holds stock in the Suburban National Bank of Palatine. The former mayor holds a total of about 22 shares of stock in the two banks.

HOWEVER, AFTER Hughes left the board in 1971, a few months after the vote on the bank facility, the village began making deposits in the bank.

Trustee Clayton Brown, who voted against the facility owns stock in a competing village bank, the First Bank and Trust Co. of Palatine.

However, Brown told the Herald last week, he did not own his stock at the time the vote was taken.

"I did not buy the stock until March, 1971 and I have been very careful to avoid any conflict while I have been on the board," he said. He owns 15 shares of stock in the bank.

HOWEVER, THE village maintains deposits in the First Bank and Trust Co. of Palatine. Brown said he also owns stock in the State Bank of South Elgin.

"Bank stock is a fantastic investment, it seems like everytime someone wants to open a bank, people come running with their money," he said.

Brown added he does not feel his owning stock in a bank that holds village accounts is a conflict.

PALATINE IS not the only suburb where officials are linked to banks. Officials in both Arlington Heights and Wheeling have also voted for matters which would benefit their bank.

• In Arlington Heights, Trustee Ralph Clarbour voted in May of last year to approve a rezoning for property for a new drive-in banking facility for the Bank and Trust Co. of Arlington Heights. He also seconded the motion to approve

Residents plan meeting

Chicago S&L plan to move here riles its neighbors

A Chicago savings and loan association's plan to relocate in Des Plaines has raised the ire of several hundred residents from that city's Southwest Side.

The residents are concerned that the move, being planned by Chicago Savings and Loan, 6245 S. Western Ave., will leave their community without a financial institution. A neighborhood meeting will be held Wednesday to discuss the situation with representatives of the association.

"The savings and loan has maligned our neighborhood and has made their profit so now they are going to leave," said Mrs. Colleen Panos. She said 150 residents who reside near the institution will attend the meeting at the St. Rita's School Annex.

HOWEVER, THE president of the institution denied the neighborhood was being deserted.

"We are most certainly not going to leave, we have too much invested here to just pull out," said Mrs. Philomena D. Pakel, president.

RESIDENTS INSISTED the savings and loans officials refused to inform them of the intended relocation.

Mrs. Pakel said the institution has not publicized its activities yet because it has not obtained state approval for the move.

"It's too bad that this could not be discussed reasonably without getting the whole neighborhood shook up," she added.

According to a petition filed with the state savings and loan commission, the institution plans to relocate in the vicinity of Lee and Oakton streets in Des Plaines.

MRS. PANOS SAID the savings and loan wants to leave the area because the neighborhood is changing racially. She claims several mortgages have been denied because of this situation.

Mrs. Pakel denied this accusation and said no mortgages have been denied to qualified applicants.

MRS. PANOS has charged the office the savings and loan would leave in the community would only be able to accept deposits and not make loans. However an amendment to the state law governing the operation of savings and loans would allow the branch offices to perform all the same functions as the main office.

"If that bill is signed, we would have no complaints, but the point is the savings and loan made their plans to move before this legislation was approved and they could leave us high and dry," Mrs. Panos said.

Donald Swope of the state savings and loan commission said that at present the institution has not filed the necessary economic data to justify its relocation. He added that there was no objection from Des Plaines banks or savings and loans to the proposed action.

The proposal must now be considered by the state commission and by the commissioner of savings and loans before approval for the move is granted.

Police tip leads to arrest of 2 Chicagoans

Two Chicagoans were arrested Friday afternoon after police said they stole a car owned by a Mount Prospect man.

The men, Jose Vasquez, 21, and Wigberto Colon, 21, were seized a short time after police said they stole the auto owned by Norbert Olade, 1446 Busse Rd.

According to police reports, the car, a 1965 Chevrolet, was stolen from outside Pacific Electric Co., 2070 Maple St., where Olade works.

Police were notified when a witness reported seeing someone break into the car and flee east on Touhy Avenue.

The men were stopped along 2930 River Rd., a short time later.

The two were charged with attempted auto theft. An additional charge of possession of burglary tools were placed against Colon.

They are being held in Cook County Jail on $10,000 bond each and have been scheduled to appear in Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court Sept. 6.

Rep. Young to speak at Kiwanis Club

U.S. Rep. Samuel Young, R-10th, will be the featured speaker today at the monthly meeting of the Des Plaines Kiwanis Club.

The luncheon meeting begins at noon at the Elks Club, 495 Lee St., Des Plaines.

Rep. Young will present a report on the recently completed 93rd Congress. The meeting is also the groups' annual Ladies Day. Wives of all members are invited to attend the luncheon.

Adult, two youths charged with pot possession

A local man was arrested Friday night after police reported finding a bag of marijuana inside his truck.

According to reports, police had been notified of three youths allegedly smoking the herb inside a van outside Sims Bowl, 1555 Ellinwood St., about 11 p.m.

Police investigated and a search of the van turned up with a bag of what is thought to be 14 grams of marijuana.

Charged with possession of marijauna was Brian Greco, 20, 1998 Big Bend Dr., the driver of the van.

Two female youths, 17 and 14 were also taken into custody and turned over to Des Plaines juvenile authorities.

Greco was released on $1,000 bond and has been scheduled to appear in Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court Sept., 27.

Male chauvinism in Cook County schools?

by REGINA OEHLER

First of two articles

No one is formally accusing suburban Cook County school districts of discriminating against women, but a lot of people may be wondering about the figures.

Why are there no women high school superintendents or principals in suburban Cook County, though there are 35 male superintendents and 69 male principals?

Why are there only three women superintendents in the 202 elementary school districts? And why are there only 103 women principals in elementary schools when there are 553 men?

Why are only women, not men, head teachers in the four elementary schools without principals?

THE MAJORITY OF high school and elementary teachers, 67 per cent, are women. The odds might indicate that more women would find their way to administrative posts by sheer weight of numbers.

They haven't.

Perhaps, as Maine Township Dist. 207 Supt. Richard Short suggested, women would have difficulty handling the older children, especially those "toughs" who are drug addicts, gang members or pyromaniacs.

Yet it is hard to believe that suburban schools can have "tougher" kids than city schools. And Chicago's ratio of men to women in administrative posts is much higher.

About a third of elementary school principals in Chicago are female. And approximately 16 per cent of the 40 high school principals are women.

DR. MARTIN BARTELS, a placement counselor at Northern Illinois University, said it has become "fashionable" for women in Chicago schools to prepare for principalships. "This is not very true in the suburban area."

He said that of the 225 candidates looking for administrative positions through his office, seven are women. Other colleges indicated similar figures.

"If women would get more interested in preparing for administrative jobs, the situation would right itself," he said.

When asked about the total absence of women in the Dist. 207 central office administration staff, Assistant Supt. Ralph Frost said Helen Beckman, director of public information, fell into that category.

Mrs. Beckman, however, was surprised when she discovered she was considered a central office administrator. She said she had no say in any decisions regarding school policies.

SHORT SAID WOMEN "tend not to choose the executive development areas." As of yet, no women has applied for the job of assistant superintendent which was open since Frost announced his retirement last spring.

Most Des Plaines school administrators, both the men and a few women, said women don't prepare for administrative jobs because they prefer to teach.

But do women prefer to teach because they think the doors to administrative jobs are closed to them?

A doctorate thesis recently completed by Phyllis Matheny, principal at Countryside School, Barrington, found that women do want administrative jobs.

She surveyed a representative sample of about 500 suburban teachers and found that women want administrative jobs in approximately the same proportion as men.

"THE MAJORITY OF female teachers," she wrote, "see the selection process for administrative positions as sexually discriminatory in their districts, however, and think they will be discriminated against if they seek such a position."

"This," she added, "is a new finding with this study. Previous studies had found women to have lower career aspirations than men." The studies she referred to were made in the 1960s.

It costs quite a bit of money to get the higher degrees that lead to an administrative job. Mrs. Matheny said she suspects many women are afraid to invest

Public officials' stock in banks a conflict?

Clarbour owns 15 shares of stock in the bank and an unknown number of shares in Northwest Trust and Savings Bank of Arlington Heights.

Clarbour said he did not consider his vote to be a conflict of interest.

"It appeared to be a good thing for the village," he explained, adding that he was offered the stock several years ago.

The drive-in vote however, appeared to be a conflict for another village official, who abstained on the measure.

• Victor Beisler, a former member of the plan commission and Bank and Trust stockholder, said he did not vote on the rezoning issue because of a possible conflict of interest.

"I have an interest in that bank and I felt the right thing to do would be to abstain from voting on the matter," he said.

He was one of the few officials who refrained from voting on a matter concerning a bank in which he held stock, the Herald investigation revealed.

• A MEMBER OF the Wheeling zoning board, Douglas Cargill took a different approach to the situation.

Cargill, who also served until this year as zoning administrator in the village, voted to grant a height variation to the Wheeling Trust and Savings Bank.

The bank, acting as a trustee, proposed in March, 1971, to build a six to eight story building near the northeast corner of Dundee Road and Milwaukee Avenue.

The bank said it would move its offices to the new building.

Cargill owns 150 shares of stock in the bank. He could not be reached for comment on the question of conflict of interest regarding his dual role in the matter.

• CITY OFFICIALS in Des Plaines also have been listed as owners of bank stock although two of the stockholding officials have sold their shares recently.

Last month, the Herald reported that Mayor Herbert Behrel, Ald. Charles Bolek and Ald. Thomas Koplos all owned stock in city banks. In 1969, all three had voted to deposit funds in the banks where they held stock.

Bolek said he sold his stock about 90 days ago and Behrel announced last week his stock has been put up for sale. The mayor said that he plans to use the proceeds for a down payment on a home in Arizona.

Behrel denied that ownership of the stock represented a conflict, but admitted that its sales would "get a monkey off my back."

Ald. Koplos has said he does not intend to sell his stock.

• ANOTHER PUBLIC official who may be involved in a conflict is Robert Lahti, president of Harper College in Palatine. Lahti is a stockholder in Bank of Elk Grove.

According to Anton Dolejs, Harper's director of finance, the Bank of Elk Grove holds $600,000 in Harper money in certificates of deposit maturing later this year. The college also has a checking account at the bank that had a July 31 balance of $26,000, Dolejs said.

Lahti, who owns about 545 shares of Bank of Elk Grove stock, according to figures at the county assessor's office. He was not available for comment yesterday.

William Mann, Harper vice president for business affairs, recently told the Herald the college does business with a number of banks, including Palatine National Bank, Bank and Trust Co. of Palatine and Northern Trust Co. of Chicago.

He said the decision to place funds in certain banks is "a question of service and convenience."

Township office to close

Due to the Labor Day weekend, the Elk Grove Township office will be closed Saturday, Sept. 1, according to George Busse, Town Clerk.

The regular 8 p.m. meeting of the Township Board will be moved from Monday, Sept. 3 to Tuesday, Sept. 4.

Bank stockholders avoid personal property taxes

by STEVE BROWN

Stockholders of five Northwest suburban banks have avoided payment of thousands of dollars in personal property taxes in recent years.

A Herald investigation into the ownership of local banks revealed that five banks have failed to report names of their stockholders to County Assessor P. J. Cullerton's office, and thus have kept the stock shares off the tax rolls.

Under Illinois law, bank stock shares are taxed as personal property and are generally assessed at 7 per cent of their book value.

The probe has also uncovered a number of major discrepancies in the assessor's records of bank stock personal property taxes.

OFFICIALS AT Cullerton's office were unable to explain the apparent irregularities and after nearly two weeks of inquiries have been unable to provide any information to the Herald as to how the banks escaped paying the tax or reporting their existence to the county assessor.

The banks include the Northwest Trust and Savings Bank, Tollway-Arlington National Bank, and North Point State Bank, all of Arlington Heights; Bank of Buffalo Grove, and the Countryside Bank in Mount Prospect.

The Herald investigation showed that the five banks did not file lists of stockholders or reports of their financial condition with the assessor's office, as required by state law.

A SPOKESMAN for the Cook County Assessor's Office said that it is the responsibility of the banks to report this information. The banks could be fined up to 50 per cent of the taxes that they owe by the assessor.

The banks have avoided paying between $15,000 and $20,000 over the past few years, according to a Herald estimate.

Officials of the five banks have been unable to explain why their institutions did not file reports with the assessor's office.

A spokesman for the North Point State Bank said the bank attorney advised officials not to file their report for 1973 because of a pending lawsuit that seeks to declare the tax unconstitutional.

HOWEVER, a spokesman for the Cook County State's Attorney's office said a pending lawsuit would not nullify the bank's obligation under the law to submit the information to the county assessor.

The North Point spokesman was unable to explain why bank officials had failed to file in 1971 and 1972. The bank was established in 1970.

Another bank official, David Potter, cashier of the Bank of Buffalo Grove, said he has reported the sales and transfers of stock to the Cook County Recorder of Deeds, but not to the assessor.

The state's attorney's office also indicated that this is not the proper procedure.

THE HERALD also uncovered a number of major discrepancies which could send the amount of taxes lost much higher.

Bruce Dobbs, the auditor for the Tollway-Arlington National Bank, suggested it is possible that the county officials misfiled or were slow in filing its 1972 stock schedules.

"You know how a bureaucracy can slow things down," he said.

A spokesman for the assessor's office said that no information had been received about the bank, which was established Jan. 10, 1972.

Stephan Jurco, the attorney and a director of the Northwest Trust and Savings Bank, said he "had no idea why the bank has filed the necessary tax information with the county."

OTHER BANK officials at Northwest Trust and Savings Bank were not able to explain why the bank had not filed with the assessor's office.

The discrepancies include a duplicate listing of all stockholders in the assessor's tax books for banks that have reported. The listings are same in all regards except that the assessment of their stock differs in all instances.

A spokesman for the assessor's office has also been unable to clarify this situation.

OTHER irregularities include major differences in the report of profits provided by each bank to the state and to the county.

According to Marvin Farmer of the Illinois Attorney General's office, banks must report true statements of their profit and other financial information to both the assessor and state commissioner of banks and trust companies.

Farmer said the undistributed profits as reported to the state and county assessor should be the same.

However, a comparison of statements filed by 14 area banks disclosed discrepancies between undistributed profits reported to the state and those reported to the county. In one case, the bank's undistributed 1972 profit, as reported to the state was more than 10 times the figure given to Cullerton's office.

Information developed in the Herald investigation has been turned over to both the assessor's office and the state's attorney's office.

Cambodia campaign ends tonight

Last day of bombing

(From Herald news services)

The last bomb dropped on Cambodia by an American plane is to fall by midnight tonight.

At that hour — Washington time — U.S. forces will reach the deadline imposed by Congress in cutting off funds for the bombing and forbidding all U.S. combat activities in Indochina.

Military officials indicated they would comply with the cutoff, bringing to an end another phase of the United States' long involvement in Southeast Asian military affairs.

Admiral Noel Gayler, commander in chief of American forces in the Pacific, said in Honolulu that after the deadline no American combat planes would be flown over Cambodia.

He said most of the warplanes will remain at bases in Thailand and on Guam for at least a while: "What we leave in Southeast Asia is largely dependent upon the actions of the North Vietnamese and their posture and the degree to which they follow the Paris agreements. That's a judgment that will have to be made on the situation as it evolves. Certainly we won't move them out instantly after the deadline."

He said unarmed reconnaissance planes will continue to make flights over Cambodia, as they do over Vietnam where the bombing halted with the signing of the peace treaty in January.

Pentagon spokesman Jerry Friedheim said in Washington that cargo planes also will continue to land on Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital, at the rate of a half dozen to a dozen each day.

But, said Friedheim, the United States will not retaliate if either reconnaissance or cargo planes are shot down.

Another official said, "Those planes are the only leverage we've got left. We want to leave the other side some small degree of uncertainty as to what the U.S. might do. That might discourage them from doing anything."

The danger to reconnaissance planes is considered minimal; that to cargo planes greater, though none have yet been shot down.

Friedheim would not rule out the possibility the administration would seek a new law from Congress if any planes were shot down, but added, "we intend to be out of the hostilities and we hope to be able to stay out of them."

In Cambodia, American warplanes flew 'round-the-clock air strikes despite hampering monsoon rains, apparently to give guerrillas in the jungles around Phnom Penh a final pounding before the bombing halt. It was the 159th consecutive day of intensified bombing.

A government spokesman said Cambodian officials have been taking part in informal peace talks with Communist leaders.

But a guerrilla leader rejected any negotiations with the "traitors," and said his forces were "at the gates of, and even inside, Phnom Penh."

In North Korea, Prince Norodom Sihanouk — who heads a government-in-exile in Peking — said victory for his forces in Cambodia is "already practically assured."

South Vietnam chipped into the debate, warning North Vietnam to get its troops out of Cambodia, but stopping short of threatening to send its own forces into the neighboring nation.

Cox throws 1-2 punch on scandals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Watergate prosecution team stepped up its pace Monday, accusing President Nixon of illegally withholding vital criminal evidence on the bugging scandal and launching a second grand jury inquiry into related "dirty tricks."

The twin actions, both in U.S. District Court here, came as Nixon himself was deep in preparations for a public response to the flood of Watergate revelations at Senate hearings now in recess until mid-September.

The White House indicated Nixon would speak out — his first public statement on Watergate since May 22 — by the end of the week, and no earlier than Wednesday. White House sources said he would make a television speech and release a detailed documentary response to charges against his administration.

Special prosecutor Archibald Cox, in a sternly worded legal brief filed with the court, argued that Nixon had no legal or constitutional right to withhold from the Watergate grand jury tape recordings of meetings with key aides that could prove or disprove charges of "gross misconduct" and criminal wrongdoing in the White House.

"The President is not above the law," Cox said in his 67-page brief. "Unlike a monarch, the President is not the sovereign."

Oral arguments on Cox's suit to obtain the nine tapes for the Watergate grand jury are scheduled Aug. 23 before Chief U.S. District Judge John S. Sirica. The case is certain to be decided finally by the Supreme Court.

An hour before two top Cox aides filed the brief, Sirica swore in a new 23-member grand jury at Cox's request to consider Watergate "spin-off" cases.

It was expected that this special grand jury would focus initially on the alleged offer by International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. (ITT) in 1971 to help underwrite the 1972 GOP national convention to the tune of $400,000 in exchange for favorable settlement of three major federal antitrust actions then pending against the conglomerate.

Other areas of inquiry were reported to include possible extortion, illegal corporate donations and other unlawful activities in connection with Nixon's 1972 campaign; alleged political espionage and sabotage last year to harass opponents; and activities of the White House squad of secret agents known as "the plumbers."

The original Watergate grand jury — which indicted the seven men convicted last January for conspiracy, burglary, bugging and wiretapping at Democratic party headquarters — will continue to investigate that case and its subsequent cover-up.

In other Washington legal turmoil:

— Vice President Spiro Agnew returned from a golfing weekend in California, facing published reports that four contractors had told federal prosecutors in Baltimore they made cash payments to Agnew in the hope of getting favored treatment in the awarding of government consulting contracts. In Annapolis, Treasury agents sorted through cartons of records amassed while Agnew was Maryland governor in 1967 and 1968.

— The government named former White House counsel John W. Dean III as a co-conspirator in the alleged plot by two former cabinet members, among others, to obstruct an SEC investigation of financier Robert Vesco's operations. Already named in indictments were former Attorney General John Mitchell and former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans.

Freeze lifts; up go prices

(From Herald news services)

President Nixon's second price freeze ended for most of the economy Monday —almost two years to the day after he imposed the first one — and some prices immediately began to climb. Even more significant increases were expected in the coming weeks under Phase IV.

The freeze was lifted on everything but beef and gasoline.

The White House stuck by its guns on its extension of the freeze and beef prices until Sept. 12, despite heavy pressure by the cattle industry and grumbling by beef-short consumers to end it early.

The freeze on petroleum products was extended one week to Aug. 19 in a move by the administration to prevent a sudden price explosion across the entire economy.

Administration officials conceded that prices would start going up Monday as the freeze was lifted, but they declined to speculate on how much or how fast they would rise, or when or where they would start to level off.

Consumers will not feel the full brunt of the price jump for some time, since under Phase IV companies with annual sales of $100 million or more must give the Cost of Living Council 30 days notice of such increases.

Chrysler Corp. immediately asked the council to allow an average $71 hike on its 1974-model cars and trucks. Unless its application is turned down, the increase automatically will go into effect before the vehicles go on public sale in late September.

American Motors is seeking an average $55 price increase while General Motors and Ford have yet to file their applications. Spokesman for the two largest auto companies said they expected applications would soon be filed.

Armco Steel Corp. in Middletown, Ohio, said it was reinstating price increases of sheet steel products which had been scheduled but were not allowed under the freeze. The increase is scheduled for Sept. 12.

Food prices, the first item removed from the price freeze nearly a month ago, apparently have stabilized after an initial big jump, although grocers warned Monday the calm might not last long.

Prices have remained about the same on most major items and in some cases, such as poultry, the cost has fallen from the highs of a few weeks ago.

"I think the poultry price reflects the consumer resistance to higher prices," said William Loman, vice president of meat operations for National Food in Chicago. "I am inclined to see some kind of stabilization in prices in general for the time being."

"There won't be a stampede on increasing the prices," said a spokesman for Dominick's in Chicago. "You won't see the price changes for a week to 10 days."

Next month the beef freeze will be lifted, and everyone expects the cost to skyrocket. Beef producers have been keeping their product off the market because they say they can make no money under the freeze.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said Monday the administration's "infatuation with farm exports" has forced up the price of almost all foods in America.

Jackson, chairman of the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, said this was his conclusion from the panel's hearings into last year's big grain sale to the Soviet Union.

"Everything else, including the well being of the American people, is being sacrificed to the notion that foreign demand for American-grown foodstuffs is more important than domestic needs," Jackson said.

Four more bodies found as Texas toll reaches 27

HOUSTON (UPI) — Sheriff's deputies Monday unearthed four more bodies on a Texas beach, raising to 27 the number of young boys killed in a three-year spree that became the worst mass murder in recent U.S. history.

The bodies — sealed in plastic bags and covered with lime — were unearthed two miles apart inseparate counties near High Island, Tex.

Two teenagers — Elmer Wayne Henley, 17, and David Owen Brooks, 18 — have confessed they were involved in the spree with a friend, Dean Allen Corll, 33. Both youths have been charged with murder, and Henley said he killed Corll in self defense last Wednesday during a paint-sniffing orgy.

In 1971, the bodies of 25 farm hands were found buried in northern California along the Feather River. Juan V. Corona, a migrant labor contractor, is serving a life term in prison on his conviction for those slayings.

Officers used a giant yellow road-grader and a back hoe Monday over three miles of beachfront where Henley and Brooks said they buried the mutilated bodies of young boys.

Some of the parents of the victims have blasted Houston law officers for not investigating missing persons reports more thoroughly.

Police Chief Herman Short Monday held a news conference to defend his department against such criticism, especially from parents in the Heights area of Houston, where 13 of the victims are believed to have lived.

Short said there were 5,228 reports of runaway youths and 2,770 adults reported missing during the past year. Asked why the City of Houston had turned down federal money to add more members to the police force, which he said was 2,000 officers short, the police chief said:

"I'm sick and tired of people believing the solution to every problem is to throw a lot of federal money on it."

85 dead in crash

LA CORUNA, Spain (UPI) — A Spanish-owned twin-engined Caravelle jetliner crashed in flames Monday on a cluster of small farm houses after aborting three attempts to land at fog-shrouded LaCoruna airport. Airline officials said all 85 passengers and crewmembers were killed.

The Aviaco Air company, a sudsidiary of Spain's Iberia Airlines, said most of the passengers were Spaniards but that seven named on the passenger list sounded foreign. The company said their nationalities were not known, but, except for a Mr. Peterson, all names sounded German.

Flaming wreckage of the plane landed near the village of Montrove, about four miles from the mountain-top airport.

Police said the houses were abandoned and no villagers were killed, although one Spanish news agency reported five dead.

The French-built plane with 79 passengers and a crew of six was on a flight from Madrid to the seaside resorts in northwestern Spain. Passengers included a swimming team from Barcelona, the airlines said.

According to Aviaco, the plane crashed after exploding in the air. The airport spokesman said the pilot aborted three attempts to land in poor visibility and then was told to divert the plane to Santiago de Compostela airport.

Shortly afterwards, radio contact broke off, he said.

The crash was the eighth in a series of fatal accidents involving Spanish airliners since the beginning of 1972.

Childerly relics accent religious retreats

by JEANNETTE DeWYZE

In north Wheeling, just west of where Elmhurst Road meets McHenry Road, is a 10-acre tract of orchard and meadowland called Childerly.

Motorists speeding along McHenry Road can barely see its small sign, hidden among the heavy trees and shrubbery.

The rambling property hidden behind the wall of trees contains huge old houses and rustic chapels, crammed with ancient books and priceless art treasures. The history of the place and the story of the people who made that history is perhaps the most remarkable part of Childerly, however.

The story of Childerly begins around the turn of the century, when a Dr. and Mrs. Frank Lillie purchased a 600-acre farm located roughly where Childerly now stands.

The Buffalo Creek farm, as it was called then, was a dairy farm handling "everything from the cows in the pasture to the milk delivered to people's doorsteps," according to M. O. Horcher, former Wheeling police chief and a member of the Calvert Foundation which now owns Childerly.

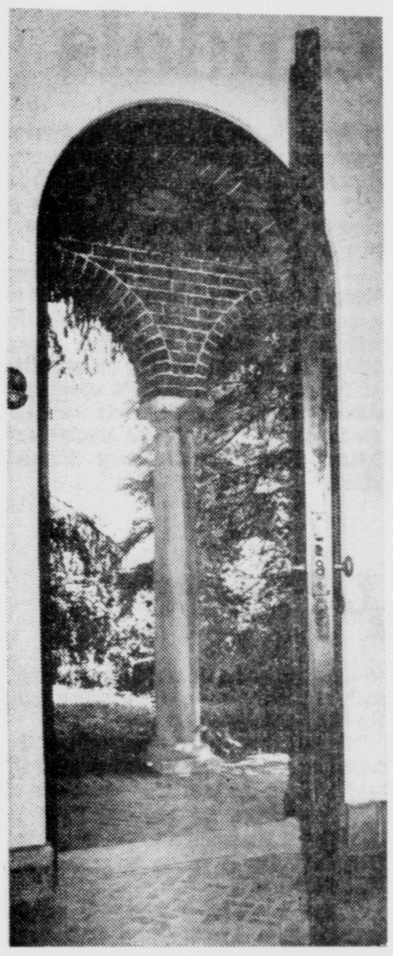
THE LILLIES purchased the property for their four daughters and three adopted sons "to learn country life in a practical way," according to a short written history of Childerly. In 1908 they built a small residence for a farm superintendent on the property.

In 1910, however, another significant aspect of Childerly was begun. According to Horcher, Mrs. Lillie is the real key to Childerly. A sensitive and socially-conscious woman, she was a close friend to the Hull House founders Ellen Starr and Jane Addams.

In 1910 she began discussing the establishment of a complex on the property for widows and children of her father's factory, the Crane Plumbing Co., then one of the largest in Chicago.

As the years went by, the complex was gradually established on the approximately 40 acres where the Addolorata Villa now stands. It bore the original name of Childerly, meaning children's meadow. The complex contained housing for the widows and children, as well as a school, gymnasium and swimming pool.

Another house was built on the 10 acres across McHenry Road from the complex for the superintendent. The farm superintendent's quarters also were soon enlarged to serve as a summer home for the Lillie family, who helped run the complex.



Childerly lives on today

MRS. LILLIE also was a deeply religious person, and the chapels which now stand on the remaining 10-acre property were set up at her urging.

One of the present chapel structures was being used as a pig pen when the Lillies purchased the farm. Built out of rough-hewn logs, the building is reputed to be the oldest in Cook County, possibly dating back to 1925.

Then in 1927 a more permanent chapel, called The Chapel of St. Francis of the Orchard, was built next to the smaller chapel.

In its heyday, filled with the Lillie family, friends, and the widows and children who lived in the 40-acre complex, Childerly must have been reminiscent of Louisa May Alcott's book, "Little Men." In fact, the book "very early became the Bible of my childhood," Mrs. Lillie once wrote, and its influence apparently was felt on her home in those years.

FINALLY, IN 1939, the Lillies decided to close down the widows and children's home. They relocated the people in the Chicago area and sold the property to the Servite Sisters for a convalescent home.

In 1941 the family deeded the remaining 10 acres, all that remains of Childerly today, to the University of Chicago. The Calvert Foundation was established to take care of the property, which Mrs. Lillie specified for use by Catholic University students and alumni for their "spiritual, educational and social uses."

Within a few years, however, the use of the land was expanded to include any religiously-oriented group who wanted to use it for retreat functions.

This function of Childerly continues today. According to Horcher, around 25-30 groups use Childerly every year, arranging retreats through the Calvert Foundation members.

A VISIT TO CHILDERLY today is a remarkable experience. The two ivy-covered chapels sit within an orchard filled with apple, pear, and cherry trees. Inside the chapel buildings, paintings and art objects, collected by Mrs. Lillie from all over the world, line the walls. Some of them are priceless, dating back to the 14th and 15th centuries.

Old books are scattered throughout the chapel library and the two main houses. One of the many rare books is a family bible dating back to the 1850's.

With the modern liturgical services, the chapels are used less frequently today than they once were, according to Horcher. Ironically, many liturgical innovations, particularly those of the Catholic Church were first experimented with by religious groups at Childerly, he says.

The Lillies were particularly fond of the Catholic saint, Francis of Assisi. His presence can be felt everywhere throughout the property, in the form of statues, paintings and plaques. The two main houses also reveal the family's fervent Catholicism.

'The Chapel of St. Francis in the Orchard'

IN ADDITION TO naming the two houses "St. Joan's" and "St. Jerome's," the family also named every room in the huge houses after some saint, and each door bears its saint's name. Revealing their healthy sense of humor, the family named all the bathrooms in the Lillie house after one of the many St. Johns.

The houses are huge rambling structures, containing enough beds for around 50 people on retreats. Records and guest books, strewn throughout the houses, date back to the 1940s. A look at their contents reveals something of the enormous variety of people who have come to Childerly over the years.

Notes written by students and clergy from all over the world punctuate the books. Many record an inner peace and tranquility rediscovered during a Childerly retreat.

Horcher says the average cost to a student for a three-day retreat, including room, board, and linen is $17.

"Our whole idea is to try and keep costs down for people who want to use Childerly," he said.

UNFORTUNATELY, however, the income from retreats is never enough to meet all the needs of the property, he said.

"Usually, we're in debt. But Childerly continues to exist somehow because so many people enjoy it," he said.

Upkeep costs for the property are enormous, although foundation members and volunteers usually manage to handle much of the necessary work on the place, he said. Childerly also has a part-time caretaker, a schoolteacher who lives on the property, who helps out with some of the upkeep.

Still, the property usually is in need of some repairs, he said.

"It does need to be fixed up, although I wouldn't want to see any major changes made in it. I wouldn't want to see it modernized or made into something which it's not," he said.

"I see Childerly as a place for people who need to get away to something really different," he said.

Oakton to expand careers program in fall

by KATHERINE BOYCE

Training students for the job market is the responsibility of a community college.

That responsibility begins before programs are planned, equipment is ordered and teachers are hired, said Kathleen Arns, dean of career programs at Oakton Community College.

Before Oakton plans new career programs, Mrs. Arns surveys industries in the community to assess the present and future job market and to study the level of skills required for new employes.

"I think that it is very unjust to start a program where you are training for employment and there is no job available," she said.

Oakton will add four career programs to its curriculum of 22 career programs next fall. The new programs will train students in electronics, automotive technology, agriculture marketing and machine technology.

OAKTON OPENED its doors three years ago in temporary facilities at 7900 N. Nagle Ave., Morton Grove, and has been adding vocational and technical career programs each year. About 20 per cent of the students at Oakton are enrolled in career programs and the college hopes to expand that number to 40 per cent.

Mrs. Arns said the college has been successful in training students and finding them well paying careers in a stable job market. The college has a placement office which helps students find employment but Mrs. Arns said the office is hardly ever used by students in career programs.

Local industries usually call us first, said Mrs. Arns, and most students are assured of a job before they graduate. The placement office usually lists more jobs than it can fill, she said.

Mrs. Arns believes everyone should have a skill. "I don't think any education is terminal" she said. In the past few years more and more college graduates trained for jobs that no longer exist on the market, find their way to Mrs. Arns' office. She asks them what sort of career they have in mind and tells them, realistically what's available.

Students who want to enter a profession like teaching, but are hesitant because jobs are scarce, might consider training for a vocational skill before they go after an academic degree, Mrs. Arns said. If you have a skill you're "self-sufficient" and you can afford to go back to school.

ONE OF Oakton's new programs, agriculture marketing, will train students as clerks and analyst assistants for commodity exchanges. The Chicago area has two major commodity exchanges, the Chicago Board of Trade and the Mercantile Exchange, through which agriculture products, such as corn, wheat and soybeans, are purchased.

Oakton students will learn how the price of commodities is affected by such things as the Russian wheat sale, flooding on the Mississippi River, and federal economic guidelines. A new law requires all registered representatives of commodity exchanges to pass a national certification exam, said Mrs. Arns, and students trained through Oakton's program should be able to pass the test.

Mrs. Arns said the program should also be attractive to people in the community who want to take courses to learn about investments in commodities. Because courses will deal with how agriculture prices rise and fall, these people should be able to make their investments more profitable, she said.

The commodity marketing business has grown rapidly in recent years and there is a shortage of skilled workers, said Mrs. Arns. The amount of money exchanged in brokerage houses has increased by 400 per cent in the past 10 years, she said, and the two Chicago exchanges have had to start their own programs to train new employes.

A survey of commodity clearance houses in the Chicago area showed an "unlimited need" for trained employes, and most of the firms are anxious to employ graduates of Oakton's program, said Mrs. Arns. Many of the courses offered at Oakton will be taught by executives in the Chicago exchanges, she said.

TWO OF the new career programs, auto mechanics and machine technology, are four year apprenticeship programs. Students work 40 hours a week in a local industry and attend classes at Oakton about twice a week. They are hired as an apprentice, receiving 50 per cent of the union scale and are placed on the union scale at the end of four years.

Students in the machine technology program can work toward a two year certificate as a general machinist and then specialize during the next two years as a tool and die maker or mold maker, receiving an associate of applied science degree from Oakton.

Students in the auto mechanics program work for auto dealers in the suburbs and attend classes at Oakton in the evening.

OFF-CAMPUS training is valuable to students in career programs, said Mrs. Arns. "It is impossible to simulate a work situation on campus," she said, and it is "impossible to duplicate the kind of equipment the industry is able to use." Students should get accustomed to a work environment with time clocks, machine noise and irate customers, she said.

The college also uses off-campus facilities because Oakton does not have space for many of the large pieces of equipment and laboratories on its temporary campus.

The college will provide an on-campus laboratory for students who enroll in the new electronics technology program this fall. Students in the two year program will be trained as electronic sales representatives, service consultants, and maintenance workers.

The program begins with the basics of electronics and will later branch off into digital electronics, communications, industrial electronics, bio-medical technology, nuclear engineering and cable television technology.

Oakton could have started an electronics career program three years ago, said Mrs. Arns, but there wasn't a great demand for electronics technicians at that time. The industry took a nose dive seven years ago, she said, but now it's beginning to hire new people.

PLANNING THE curriculum for career programs revolves around suggestions from advisory committees in each career, said Mrs. Arns. Management personnel in local industries are members of the committees and during their meetings they give the college valuable information on the status of the job market and the skills and training needed in each program.

Career programs "have to be relevant," said Mrs. Arns, "the curriculum must be kept up to date. We cannot teach something to these students that hasn't been used in industry for two years."

CAREER PROGRAMS at Oakton Community College come under the direction of Kathleen Arns, assistant dean of instruction. The college will add four new programs to its curriculum this fall.

Assistant superintendent

River Trails aide resigns

by MARY HOULIHAN

Donnalois Ahlstedt has resigned as assistant of the superintendent of River Trails School Dist. 26, effective Sept. 1.

In a letter sent to the board of education read at Tuesday's meeting, Mrs. Ahlstedt said she was leaving the district to take a new job at a better salary. In September, she takes over as director of curriculum in Glenview Dist. 34.

Though the board accepted Mrs. Ahlstedt's resignation, there were two board members who voted against accepting the resignation, Board Pres. Lloyd Demel and Leora Rosen.

In voting against acceptance of the resignation, Demel said he realized the motion would be passed. He voted against the motion for two reasons, he said: because "I don't like people breaking contracts indiscriminately," and "I think Donnalois has made a contribution and could continue to make a contribution.

Mrs. Ahlstedt took over as assistant to the superintendent a little more than a year ago. The position, a new one, was created by then-Supt. Thomas Warden, who resigned under pressure in May.

Asked if one of the reasons Mrs. Ahlstedt left was because she was disgruntled about Warden's resignation, acting Supt. James Retzlaff said, "I wouldn't care to comment on that."

Mrs. Ahlstedt was out of town and cound not be reached for comment.

Replacing her in the post of assistant to the superintendent next year will be Al Levine, the district's art consultant. Levine holds a master's degree in fine arts from Drake University. He is also taking administrative courses in education.

In other business Tuesday the board directed the administration to proceed with the necessary steps to sell bonds to cover the cost of Life Safety code repairs at the district's schools.

According to board member William Haase, the total cost of repairs has been estimated at about $276,000. Thirty thousand dollars of these repairs has already been deducted from the district's Life Safety fund. The rest, about $250,000 worth, will be raised by the sale of bonds.

To raise money for the repairs, the district plans to levy a special bond tax. Despite the need to levy a tax for the project, the board does not expect the district's total tax rate to increase appreciable next year.

THE REASON FOR this, Haase said, is that the board plans to reduce several levies next year by a few cents. Also, the Life Safety levy will be replaced by the bond levy.

The reason for selling bonds to pay for the project, Haase said, is that "we can get the work done earlier and presumably cheaper." If the board had tried to raise the money by raising the Life Safety levy, taxes for the levy would not be received until spring, 1974.

"If you go with the bonding, you get all the money right now and you get all the work done now," said Haase.

Haase said the board will consider the question of tax levies at its budget committee meeting on Aug. 30.

Scouting news

by CHRIS ERBACH

Who, in his right mind, would volunteer to chauffer a school bus containing 31 anxious Boy Scouts into the wilds of Ontario, Canada, and remain there with them for two weeks?

Daniel W. Morava undertook what may have been the biggest venture of his life a few weeks ago. Mr. Morava, along with Paul Kavanaugh, several other adults and senior scouts of Troop 60 planned and executed this venture — a two week summer camp at the Rushing River Provincial Park in Ontario, Canada.

On the sunny morning of July 14, the St. Stephen's school bus rumbled off on its first leg of the 825 mile journey. Even though the trek was interrupted by a blown fuel pump and two shredded fan belts, we made it to the U.S. Air Force Base in Duluth, Minn., the first day.

After a hearty breakfast there the next morning, we proceeded until we reached the park. After a two day bus ride, it took quite a bit of energy on the part of senior patrol leader Chris Erbach and his assistant, Mike Erbach, to get the hyper-excited boys to set up camp. Don McGregor, the district Scout manager, was there to greet us.

THERE WAS much to be done those first few days. The "buddy" system had to be employed, cooking schedules made and merit badge work started. All 31 boys were kept busy continually, mostly on the advancement trail. A total of 13 skill awards and 78 merit badges were earned to prove this. Troop 60 ate army style, with one patrol doing the entire cooking for that day.

The closest bit of cilization was the Dog Tooth Resort which was managed by Jerry and June Cornell. They were our post-office, boat-rental, ice-station and friendly-neighbor all rolled into one.

Many excursions were taken on the huge Dog Tooth Lake, the majority of them for fishing. On the second Sunday of our trip, a Canadian Scout executive, George Noble, invited the entire troop to visit his island home on the lake.

We were not the only guests, Mr. Noble also had three Canadian Scouts, Brent, Drew and Mark Stajkowski, staying there.

EVERYONE WAS busy doing their own thing. Mike Anderson, Phil Lambrechts and Greg Moraya challenged fate by riding down the rapids on their bottoms. Jim Albers and Jerry Kavanaugh never let their fishing poles rest. As usual, Dan Morava Jr. and Bob Wolinski were out "scouting" for young ladies. The newer boys, Bruce Wolf, Dave Buckwheats, Dave Detzner, Kevin Martin and Bill Suckow were trying to get out of their initiation.

Believe it or not, Mike Chase and John Lange actually worked on Merit Badges. Tom Klein gave Kenora's hospital business as he took 16 stitches to put his leg back together. Mike Anderson never did get that short splice. And Mr. Jim Ragusin was the only one to see a bear.

There were a few families who traveled to Canada along with the troop. These included the Paul Kavanaugh family, the Dan Morava family, the Dennis LaSota clan, Father Mike Belinda, the Ragusin and the Koren families.

As the two weeks drifted by, many not-soon-forgotten adventures occurred. A gigantic signal tower, built by scouts for their pioneer badge, collapsed under the weight of some over-anxious boys. Fortunately, no one was hurt. Rapids in the near-by river were conquered and the big ones got away as usual. Everyone was sad at the thought of leaving.

As the bright yellow sun melted over the horizon on that final day, the bus was unceremoniously repacked. The Scouts returned home July 28.

As far as we know, no other troop in our Council has succeeded in running a successful two week summer camp in a foreign country. Every boy who went on this trip received an Ontario coat of arms patch.

Bond reduced in burglary case

A Cook County Circuit Court judge yesterday reduced bond on a Des Plaines man and a Schaumburg man arrested Saturday by Mount Prospect police. The men allegedly were burglarizing a house in the village.

Judge George J. Zimmerman reduced bond from $10,000 to $7,000 each on Rex J. Austin, 18, of 1436 Thacker St., Des Plaines, and Vincent J. Badlamenti, 20, of 504 Brockton Pl., Schaumburg. They were arrested just before 7 p.m. Saturday at 111 N. Horner Ln. and spent the next two days in Mount Prospect jail.

Police said that when they investigated a report of two intoxicated men on Horner Lane, they found Badlamenti at the front door of the John E. Katzler home, 111 N. Horner Ln. A neighbor showed police a torn screen at the back of the Katzler home and, following a noise heard in the home, police said they found Austin inside.

According to police, when Austin was found he was in a bedroom holding a jewelry case. Austin allegedly told police he was looking for a ring he had given Luan Katzler. The girl denied any knowledge of the ring and said she doesn't "associate" with the two men.

Badlamenti, police said, had a screwdriver sticking out of a pocket when he was arrested. He and Austin are to appear Sept. 14 in Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Male chauvinism in Cook County schools?

the money since they feel they will not get the job anyway.

Even if they do, will they get the same pay as men? National averages show the percentage of women's salaries as compared to men's slightly, but steadily decreasing since the 1960s.

MEN AND WOMEN teachers in Des Plaines school districts are paid on a salary schedule, based on numbers of years of experience and education. The salary schedule applies to all teachers with no special merit raises.

Administrators, on the other hand, are paid individually according to what school boards and administrators decide on. Pay is partially based on merit.

A study completed by Richard J. Martwick, superintendent of schools for suburban Cook County, shows that women administrators average about $4,000 a year less than men, though generally they are a year older and have a year more experience.

Yet women are not less competent than men. "I've encountered very, very few marginal women administrators," said Dist. 63 Supt. G. Allen Gogo. "I have the feeling that it's more difficult for a woman to achieve administrative status than it is for a man, and when she does, she's really tops."

PART OF THE difference in salary obviously comes from the fact that there are very few women in the higher — and better paid — administrative positions.

Most of the women in Mrs. Matheny's study said women must work harder than men with similar qualifications and talents to achieve an administrative position, and that men receive more encouragement from their superiors to seek administrative positions than do women.

None of the Des Plaines administrators said they encouraged men more than women, or that they even considered sex in choosing administrators. But then, discrimination is a federal offense, punishable by law.

Tomorrow: a look at the women administrators in Des Plaines school districts.

Thieves pull woman in bush, steal purse

A Des Plaines woman was robbed Friday night by thieves who pulled her into a clump of bushes near her home and fled with her purse, according to Des Plaines police.

Police said the purse contained $1 in cash.

The victim, Gloria Kolacek, 47, 2436 Scott St., told police she was walking home from work about 9 p.m. when a man grabbed her, snatched her purse and ran south on Scott Street to a dark, older model car and drove off.

Police said the woman suffered a bruise in the attack, but did not require hospital treatment.

Her assailant was described as about 5 feet 10 inches tall weighing 150 pounds with medium-length sandy hair.

Police also said the man wore a white T-shirt and blue jeans.

Schools, parents meet—just to talk

A group of five parents met with Dist. 63 school board members and administrators and decided to expand their communication through normal channels.

Mrs. Phyllis Friedland, who earlier this summer complained that the Dist. 63 Elementary School Board had not listened to the taxpayers, suggested a group meet to improve existing lines of communication.

HER IDEA WAS accepted by the five parents, three administrators and two board members who attended Thursday's meeting to establish a committee to improve communications within the district.

The next meeting, which Supt. G. Allen Gogo promised would be better publicized, will be held at 8 p.m. Sept. 17 in Apollo School, 10100 Dee Rd. Des Plaines.

The parents asked Gogo to send out letters to all district parents, flyers to teachers, letters to PTA heads of information to newspapers about the upcoming meeting.

The five parents blamed the recent flare-up between school board members and parents on misunderstandings and lack of information.

PARENTS IN THE district, after teachers had picketed and protested the cut of 32 teaching positions, hotly debated with the board over the cuts, which parents said would hurt the educational program in the schools.

"The problem is that nothing (information) was filtering down to the parents at large," Mrs. Friedland said.

"There were no channels of cummunication to the administration," parent Ann Jacobs added.

"All we heard, was that our teachers, who we valued, were picketing in the rain," said parent Eileen DuBoe. "This was unheard of."

She added that the parents did not know the administration's side of the story during the teacher cut controversy.

The parents said that the avenues of communication were lacking. PTAs, said Happy Reiss, wife of board member Larry Reiss, refused to get involved in the controversy and had no answers.

THE DISTRICT'S newsletter, the parents said, contained notable gaps in information, such as explaining how teacher pupil ratios were arrived at.

No meetings were held to discuss the cuts and have them explained until the budget meeting, where over 200 parents showed up and argued for hours, said Mrs. Jacobs.

"The whole thing seemed ridiculous," said Mrs. Reiss. "It looked like the board had already made up their minds. These teachers were going to be cut no matter what."

A brief discussion convinced the five parents that there were numerous avenues of communication. People could attend board meetings and discuss questions, there were PTA boards and executive committees that met regularly with the administration.

"I don't know of any district that communicates more," Assistant Supt. Lenore Page said.

"There are organs that already exist, but we're not happy about those organs," Mrs. Friedland said. She suggested those be refined by the newly-formed Dist. 63 Advisory Committee of Communications.

Dorothy Meyer's advice to middle-aged ladies:

Trying it all in week leaves you broke, bruised

by DOROTHY MEYER

If indications of a successful vacation include coming home broke, pooped and with a big bruise on the right rump, then I just had a successful vacation. I'm broke because of Las Vegas and pooped because middle-aged ladies shouldn't try to ride a horse in New Mexico, beat the slots in Vegas and visit California cousins all in one week.

The horse, of course, accounts for the bruise. Him, or the guy who gave me a hand up.

The truth of the matter is that I didn't actually ride because the horse and I agreed that it would not be a good idea since my last venture aboard something with four legs was when I was seven at a neighborhood pony ride and I fell off. It wasn't easy to fall off that pony because he was very short and I had such long legs that my feet dragged, but I managed.

THE NEW MEXICO horse was 17 hands high, which must mean very big because I was so tall in the saddle that my nose started bleeding as soon as I got up there. We were halfway up a mountain to start with, the cracking of my ears had him kind of skittery and I figured one hearty "Hi Yo, Silver," would cause him to leap tall buildings in a single bound. Which is not the way I want to go.

So I got off my high horse in New Mexico and went to Las Vegas.

That's going from the sublime to the ridiculous if you hate to part with money because the horse was for free. However, I am my mother's daughter and Mom was a paradox of frugality and addiction to slot machines, her theory being that if she wanted to economize all year so she could blow it on a slot machine that was her business.

So I blew my money on the slot machines and that's my business.

But now I'm addicted too.

WHEN I FINALLY went to bed the first night, I saw nickels all over the place as soon as I closed my eyes. Which wasn't the way it was when I had them open.

My brother and his wife were with me in Las Vegas and next morning I asked them if they'd seen nickels too when they closed their eyes and Olga said yes. Art said no. But I guess that's understandable because we'd seen a topless show just before we went to bed.

I thought I could forget slot machines when I left Las Vegas, but one of my California cousins has a gear-shift type faucet on the kitchen sink and I tore it off — the minute my hand closed around the handle, I put a nickel down the drain and pulled.

EVEN GETTING back to work hasn't helped. When I put money in the coffee machine I reach for the handle and wonder where it is, and at the cigarette machine I slip my coins in the slot and wait for the package indicators to start rolling.

I can't even type any more. Everytime I reach for the carriage return I automatically give it a yank and the typewriter ends up in my lap.

Oops, there it goes again.

GOP searches for 'talent'

We are happy to see the Republican Party in Cook County out beating the bushes to locate blue ribbon candidates for the approaching 1974 elections.

The current lack of confidence in government, and repeated reports of reluctance of qualified candidates to subject themselves to the prevailing public skepticism, make it doubly important to search out top-grade nominees for public office.

We have noted here before a disenchantment with the practice of "slating" candidates for offices by insiders in both the Democratic and Republican parties. We have also noted the great wealth of talent and integrity among potential public servants to be found in the Chicago suburbs.

It appears that the "search committee" formed by the Cook County GOP might well serve to ameliorate whatever disadvantages there are in "slate-making" and to bring to the surface some of those talented people who might not otherwise seek public office.

While the candidate search will not eliminate the practice of slate-making, it should at least open the range of potential candidates from whom the slate-makers will make their choices.

Well-intentioned members of the search committee from the Northwest suburbs, which includes Wheeling Township Supervisor Ethel Kolerus; State Rep. Virginia Macdonald, R-Arlington Heights; County Commissioner Floyd Fulle of Des Plaines; and township committeemen Richard Cowen of Wheeling Township and Carl Hansen of Elk Grove Township, have already come up with suggestions of a number of suburban candidates.

Their initial efforts have brought forth a number of names of persons with varying degrees of experience in politics and public service, and each of those identified by the suburban contingent of the search committee are viable candidates for office.

Hopefully, the committee will be able to enlist others who have not yet entered the public arena but who possess the qualities of experience and integrity so sorely needed in government today.

In the almost imperceptible but (we like to believe) continuing upgrading of the Illinois legislature, a major step was the 1964 election. In that year, a quirk in election laws required all candidates to campaign on a statewide ticket, and the strict control of slate-makers was temporarily aborted. The result was that a number of persons who otherwise would not have received backing of the political kingmakers were able to enter into the election. A number of outstanding legislators were elected in that year.

By opening up the slate-making process through its search committee, we hope the Cook County Republicans can achieve a similar result.

Among the few words of wisdom which came from John Erlichman in his testimony before the Watergate Committee was his rebuttal to the advice of previous witness Gordon Strachan to "stay away" from government. Instead, Erlichman urged young people to "come and do better."

Enlisting people to "come and do better" is the purpose of the GOP search committee, and we wish them well.

Grocery bills shaking dinnertables

Why soaring food prices?

by DON OAKLEY

Why, all of a sudden, are food prices soaring?

According to one expert — L. H. Simerl of the Cooperative Extension of the University of Illinois' College of Agriculture — there are four main causes, and none of them developed all that suddenly.

(1) The rising incomes of consumers.

The increased prosperity of most Americans is readily apparent to everyone who has observed the changes in personal and family living conditions over the past 10 or 20 years, writes Simerl in Patrons Guide, published by FS Services of Mendota, Ill.

Grain-fed beef, for example, once a luxury enjoyed only by higher income families, has become a "necessity of life." Despite recent protests — and the abnormal situation regarding beef — food is more abundant and is available in more convenient forms. More consumers now can, and do, buy these foods with much less consideration about prices than their parents and grandparents.

One result is that normal changes in supplies now cause much larger price swings than in earlier years.

(2) The increasing specialization of farmers.

In earlier times, farmers produced a variety of crops and livestock. They could make adjustments to changing weather and market conditions. Now, most farmers are specialists. They produce only one or two crops or kinds of livestock.

A broiler producer, for example, often produces nothing else, not even the feed he uses. He must buy feed, virtually regardless of cost. The same condition applies increasingly to the producers of eggs and pork, to dairymen and to the operators of cattle feedlots.

(3) The disappearance of price-stabilizing reserves of farm products.

For most of the past 40 years, the government helped stabilize farm prices by buying when supplies were excessive and selling when there were shortages.

Now, the government has only small reserves that can be sold to meet rising demands from our own people and from other lands.

(4) The growing tendency of world demand for farm products to increase faster than production.

Until recently, the optimists who believed that the world could feed all its people seemed to be right. But 1971 and 1972 brought short crops in many places — Russia, China, India, Southeast Asia and elsewhere. Bad weather plagued most of the United States.

Where have all the bargains gone?

This year, the principal U. S. crops, soybeans and feed grains, may again be skimpy. Short supplies always produce unstable prices.

All of these great changes — consumer prosperity, specialization of farmers, diminishing stocks of grain and short crops — have combined to produce larger swings in the prices of farm products, says Simerl.

None of this will be of much consolation to harried housewives, or to the person on a fixed income. But at least it indicates there is no one "villain" responsible for the current phenomenon of shortages and inflation shaking the nation's dinnertable.

Letters to the fence post

Readers urge auto tag enforcement

Regarding the large numbers of Arlington Heights apartment dwellers who aren't buying auto stickers (Aug. 7), the village ought not to be offering excuses as to why the law is not being enforced, thus assuring noncompliers that they have nothing to worry about and encouraging others to join their ranks next year.

Rather, creative solutions to the problem ought to be sought. Apartment managers ought to be required to notify the village any time someone signs a lease for one year or longer. The village could then contact the party and give them the opportunity to comply with the law. Persons currently in residence could easily be notified through the distribution of handbills or perhaps a sign in the foyer of each building that auto stickers are required, that random checks would be made on a regular basis and that fines for noncompliance would be assessed.

IF A BLANKET sweep is out of the question because Springfield will not accept long lists of license numbers, perhaps 20 per day could be checked. If only half belonged to village residents, the resulting fines and sticker fees might make the effort well worthwhile.

If apartment dwellers simply knew that the law was being enforced and that stiff fines were being assessed, the number of unregistered cars might be drastically reduced. Just the sight of a police officer writing down license numbers on a sunny Sunday afternoon might cause many car owners to show up at the village hall the next day. Another solution might be to simply ticket unregistered cars in the apartment parking lots and shift the burden of proof from the village to the owner of the car. Since this would inconvenience the visitor, he ought to be able to nullify the ticket by sending in a copy of his state registration. There are other solutions to the problem, I'm sure. All we have to do is think of them.

David R. Thiessen.

ONCE THERE WAS an Illinois law which proved to be unenforceable. It called for the payment of a personal property tax, but only the naive and the suckers paid this "stupid tax." After many years of half-hearted attempts to enforce the law, it was repealed.

Now we have it on excellent authority that there is an Arlington Heights ordinance which is also unenforceable. It calls for a fee to be paid for each motor vehicle owned by an Arlington Heights resident. Here, too, the tax is paid by the naive and those listed on the record, while certain residents simply ignore their civic responsibility, according to a recent press report.

If, indeed, the vehicle license tax cannot be equitably applied to all the village residents, let us see to it that the ordinance is repealed before the start of a new year, in the interests of fair play. A more just method of securing needed revenue should be adopted.

OUR POLICE have no hesitancy in stopping motorists and asking for the driver's license, and such a procedure should pinpoint many of those not complying with the law. If the "teeth of the ordinance" are allowed to bite to the full extent, it should discourage many of the cheaters.

It seems to me that something should be done instead of letting the "good guys" carry the full load.

Empty homes waiting for children

In the article "Where does a woman go?" in your Suburban Living section, Aug. 6, the question of whether a community hospital can deny the local women their legal rights to an abortion is raised. What about the legal right of the fetus, an innocent, unprotected human being whose basic right to life is denied in an abortion?

As to the "medical techniques of early abortion," the suction method described as extracting "nothing more than a tissue" is actually the violent pulling apart of the limbs and vital organs of a human baby.

In all fairness, why not publish an article examining the problem from the other viewpoint, those who are trying to save lives? Please do an interview with a pregnancy counseling service which offers help to those women who recognize what "pregnancy termination" really means, the taking of one life for the convenience of another.

There are alternatives to abortion, and empty homes waiting for adoptable children.

Business Today

by DEAN C. MILLER

NEW YORK — Budgeting is an economic "must" for nations, businesses and individuals, so teaching a child how to manage money should be done as early as possible.

Since spending habits are acquired at an early age, that's when parents should start the learning process.

Children first notice money when they visit stores with parents or friends. Shopping trips with preschoolers might be the best time to start the learning process, according to "Consumer Views," a First National City Bank of New York publication that has reviewed the question. "Give your toddler or five-year-old some change and let him pay for his own crayons," the bank suggests.

ONCE THE CHILD becomes aware of numbers let him decide whether he wants to spend his coin on one soda or a pack of gum. Under five or six, according to the experts, children still are too young for a weekly allowance. They don't have a sense of "tomorrow," a necessary ingredient in any such planning.

By the time they are first graders, most youngsters are ready for a regular weekly allowance. This can save the parents headaches and money as well as give the child budget experience. Children in this period ask for everything from ice cream to baseball cards. If they are on allowance, they tend to spend more carefully.

At the start, keep the child's budget responsibilities simple. An allowance for a child under eight or nine should be only enough to buy ice cream, inexpensive toys and other small things that make him happy.

At nine or 10, the allowance can cover more needs. Here's when the "heart to heart" talks begin. Sit down with him and list his needs and fancied needs — lunch, carfare, movies, magazines. Along about that time it also might be wise to help the child set up a record of what he spends for a period of two weeks or so.

IT'S IMPORTANT, however, that this mini-budget includes some extras for the child. He won't learn much about managing money from an allowance that includes only "must" items.

Experts say an allowance should be kept on a business basis. Forget emotionalism or forget the experiment. If the allowance is designed to teach the child to handle money it should be a regular part of his life. Not a carrot dangled before his nose.

There's nothing wrong with making junior stay home from a movie because he refused to clean up his room. But disciplinary action should come after the allowance is handed over, not tied in with it through withholding.

If an older child decides to get an outside job it may in many instances be unwise to discontinue or reduce the allowance. That, in effect, is penalizing his initiative. Talk it over and come to some understanding. A savings account, or whatever.

And there will be times when the child, like the parent, comes up flat broke. Should you bail him out? Yes, say the experts. But make it in the form of an advance. That teaches him about borrowing and buying on credit . . . and Low-priced issues stay strong; upturn on way?

NEW YORK — "Indications are that dampers on market sentiment are gradually lifting and that an important bottoming process is under way," says The Spear Market Report. The continued strength of low-priced issues suggests, the letter says, that "July witnessed at least intermediate lows for blue chips and top-drawer growth stocks, while the lows of May and June were of a more permanent nature for many issues of secondary quality."

WORKER PRODUCTIVITY in the nonfarm private economy dropped in the second quarter of 1973 after climbing steadily over the past year, according to Manufacturers Hanover Trust's Financial Digest. This drop went beyond expectations for a gradual slowing in productivity as the economy moves closer to full utilization of resources, the letter says. If the preliminary productivity figure for the second quarter is accurate, it adds, "The implication for prices, in view of steadily rising labor costs, is quite disturbing.

THE UPSURGE in interest rates is "at this stage influenced more by inflationary psychology than by economics," Standard & Poor's "The Outlook" says. The letter says borrowing demands have lost all relationship to the growth in economic activity. Although there is no way of knowing when interest rates will peak, it says "the rapid acceleration that has taken place in just the past two weeks strongly suggest that a climax is that much closer."

THE STOCK MARKET started a summer rally on July 9 reversing a six months' down-trend, according to Abraham & Co.'s The Technical Review. "The recovery could help the Dow to a gain of 10 per cent or more from the July intraday low at 864," says the letter. Despite the recent strength of the market, it cautions there is "a distinct risk of another steep decline in the overall stock price movement after the summer rally has run its course."

Sacred Heart students plan bike hike, picnic

Seniors at Sacred Heart of Mary High School in Rolling Meadows plan a bike hike and picnic Thursday at Frontier Park in Arlington Heights.

The bike hike starts at 11 a.m. from the school. Seniors are asked to pack a sack lunch for the day. A $2 fee for the day will be collected on Wednesday.

Firms give cash awards for suggestions

Employes: your ideas are valuable

by LEA TONKIN

Keypuncher Pat Bennett used to spend a good part of her time on the job punching the same information on cards over and over again. She was getting fed up with the repetition in her job at the Western Electric central region headquarters in Rolling Meadows.

"I really got disgusted," she recalls. "It's something you think of. One day I finally asked the supervisor, why? And that's how it all got started."

What she started was a chain of events leading to the elimination of this busy work, a $255 initial award from the company for her suggestion and eventually a $1905 award, less taxes. Pat's idea saved the company time and the cost of extra cards. And it earned Pat the extra money for vacation and savings, as well as recognition from others in her department.

AT THE SAME PLANT, three inventive employes in the data center put their heads together on a new way to update statistical reports. "Basically, we cut a job down from two weeks to one week," says Dennis Wacha, a former programmer. Dennis worked on the mechanics of the proposed change, computer operator Kathy Hoffman supplied the data and her husband Wayne worked on the reports. The finished product was a money saving suggestion, for which the company paid each of the three ideapeople $165. "It's a matter of going home to write it up," says Kathy. "I'll be honest, it's the money I'm interested in. Dennis adds, "Once you get one suggestion accepted, you keep thinking about new ideas." He earned a WE suggestion award for more than $500 several years ago.

IN ELK GROVE Village, maintenance department employe Bernard Greffy is in line for a $100 award from his company, Pioneer Screw and Nut Co. He turned in a suggestion for modifying a group of roller machines in the plant. This reduced "downtime" when the machines were shut down for repairs and saved the company a lot of money.

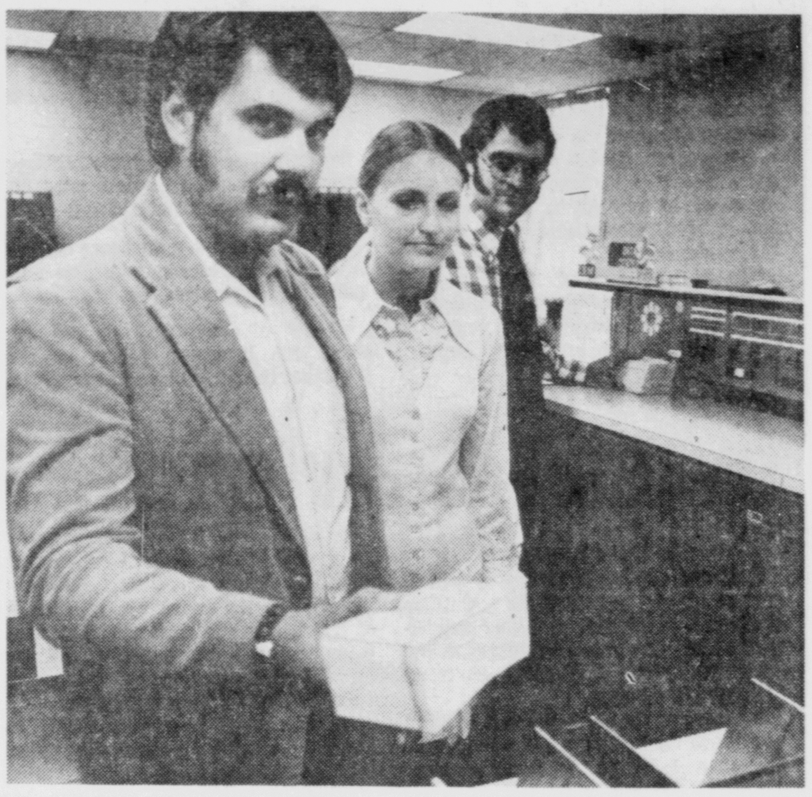
AT THE EXECUTIVE headquarters of United Air Lines headquarters in Elk Grove township, secretary Charlotte Beske was processing "hot card" lists. (United credit cards reported lost or stolen). She noticed that an IBM card was pulled for each card to be added to the list. Lists of these numbers were typed and then keypunched. Charlotte suggested that the lists could be duplicated directly from the IBM cards and that hand dating of cards could be eliminated. Her idea was investigated and adopted. For the $660 savings in labor costs, Charlotte received a $65 award.

And just last week, a United flight crew member from the East coast pulled in a $700 suggestion award for his bright idea: Cut down the length of hand towels used on the aircraft from 15 to 13 inches. At a savings of 80 cents a thousand, the company saved $7,000 on its first order.

* * * *

FOR EACH OF THESE creative people there is a team of suggestion system professionals, and decision-makers ready and waiting to read all the good ideas they can lay hands on. Charlie Foos at United is one of the pros in the suggestions systems business, working with a staff at Elk Grove to channel the creativity of some 49,000 employes scattered across the country.



GOOD IDEAS paid off for triple award winners in the data processing department at Western Electric, Rolling Meadows. Shown from left, are Dennis Wacha, Kathy and Wayne Hoffman. Each gained $165 for their suggestion.

"It's big business, and it's also good business," says Foos. "Our suggestion system program produces savings in the millions of dollars." Last year United saved $2,370,000 as a direct result of employe suggestions which were adopted by the company.

Successful suggestors at United are usually paid 10 per cent of the first year's savings resulting from their ideas. Regional champions are named for the top suggestors and the suggestion system managers and an overall winner for the year is named.

An average one out of four suggestions is adopted. "Three out of four times you're saying no to an employe. But in telling you no, we're saying we like your ideas," Foos said. "It makes you a more knowledgeable employe, and hopefully, we communicate a response."

Workers themselves often have the most insights when it comes to job improvements, says Foos. "Employes come to their jobs not just with their hands and their bodies, but with their minds. It won't cost any more salary dollars to share their ideas."

A successful program is a sincere request — we want your ideas — from the top management level right on down the line, he adds. Prompt response and a fair consideration of suggestions are essential.

Foos served as president of the National Association of Suggestion Systems (NASS) last year. He also earned the association's highest award for the aircraft industry performance.

NEARLY 29,000 IDEAS were submitted by United employes in 1972. They could be anything from raising the hem on a stewardess' dress to the use of a laser beam to activate a complex aircraft mechanism. Suggestors can remain anonymous, or they may choose to be identified.

The payoff is great in terms of cost savings, Foos said. Other benefits in a suggestion system program include access to management, improved communications and morale. The creative employe receives recognition from fellow workers in an award presentation. "It's the strongest thing we've got going for us," says Foos.

This is seconded by Milt Tatter, a Wheeling resident who is NASS executive secretary. Recognition and involvement in company operations are important to the employes, he says.

"It's a social program that works," Tatter says enthusiastically. He'd like to see the day when corporations will appoint a director of creativity. "It's one of the spokes of building a motivational wheel — a whole frame of reference," Tatter continued. "Nobody ever suggested himself out of a job, just on to a better job."

A SUGGESTION system program provides an outlet for employe creativity and generates extra revenues for the company at the same time. Most programs break even within the first year. Then they give back the company five bucks for every one put into the program, Tatter says.

Many of the 1,200 NASS members are large corporations which have had formal programs for years. But the idea business can also benefit a smaller company, says Irwin Danz. He coordinates the suggestion program at Pioneer Screw and Nut Co. where there are less than 300 employes.

Pioneer's program is only a few months old, but Danz is optimistic. "It's the type of thing that can benefit the company and everybody else," he says. "It makes a job a lot more fun for everybody, when you're thinking about the best job you can do, rather than just putting in 8 hours, I couldn't think of anything more discouraging, than just putting in your time and waiting to die."

Murnane gets new Crane post

Edward D. Murnane, 29, former political writer for Paddock Publications, has been named executive assistant to U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th.

Murnane has been a member of Crane's staff since June, 1971.

His new position was announced following the election of Edwin J. Feulner Jr., 31, Crane's administrative assistant, as president of the Robert Schuchman Foundation Center for the Public Interest. Feulner will remain on the congressman's staff as a special assistant, acting primarily as consultant on legislative affairs.

AS EXECUTIVE assistant, Murnane will supervise operation of Crane's offices in Washington, Chicago and Arlington Heights, and will continue as press assistant to the congressman.

"I am delighted to have Ed Murnane in this new position," Crane said. "He has a very thorough knowledge of the 12th Congressional District and its residents and he is very well known in the district." Murnane has lived in Arlington Heights and Palatine and is a former vice president of the Palatine Jaycees and former vice president of the board of directors of the Twinbrook YMCA in Schaumburg.

Murnane is a journalism graduate of Northern Illinois University and served five years on the Paddock staff as news editor, city editor, supervising editor and political editor. In 1970, he was honored by the American Political Science Association for distinguished reporting of public affairs, and in the following year he was selected as one of eight journalists in the nation to participate in the Congressional Fellowship program.

Homestead exemption filing date nears

Senior citizens' deadline for filing for tax Homestead Exemptions is Sept. 1.

"In order for persons 65 years of age or over to qualify for the Homestead Exemption and have the exemption applied to the property tax bill payable next year it is necessary to have the application approved by our office no later than Sept. 1, 1973," Cook County Assessor P.J. Cullerton said.

The assessor mailed 110,000 renewal forms to senior citizens who qualified for the homestead exemption last year. The renewal forms also are due by Sept. 1, Cullerton noted.

Senior citizens who qualified for the exemption last year realized $120.00 tax savings on property tax blls payable this year, Cullerton added.

Senior citizens seeking the homestead exemption for the first time must complete an application and provide:

- Proof of age — a medicare card or a birth certificate or some other document indicating the person's age.
- Proof of ownership — a copy of a deed, title insurance policy, or other proof that the person owns the property.
- Proof of residence — this can be indicated on the application form.

To qualify for the homestead exemption a person must own and reside in his house, apartment building, condominium or cooperative apartment as of Jan. 1, 1973. The owner mst also be 65 years of age as of Jan. 1, 1973.

Applications and other information concerning the homestead exemption may be acquired by contacting the Assessor's Homestead Exemption Department in the County Building at 118 N. Clark St., Chicago. The telephone number is 443-6151.

'Traffic control' O'Hare crash cause

by RICH HONACK

Failure of the traffic control system at O'Hare Airport to ensure the separation of aircraft on the ground during restricted visibility has been determined as the "probable cause" of the Dec. 20 crash between two airliners.

Ten persons were killed in the collision of a North Central DC-9 and a Delta Airlines Convair 880 on that foggy evening. All the fatalities were passengers on the DC-9, which was attempting to take off when it collided with the upper tail section of the Delta jet.

The cause, released last Friday, came after months of study by the National Transportation Safety Board. It studied evidence received immediately following the early evening crash as well as several weeks of testimony it heard in public hearings earlier this year.

THE BOARD decided on a probable cause from eight separate findings. They were:

- Visibility at O'Hare at the time of the accident was ¼ of a mile in the fog.
- Airport traffic beyond the confines of the main terminal area could not be observed visually from the control tower.
- The ASDE "BRITE" radar equipment at the O'Hare tower provided indistinct displays of airport ground traffic.
- A transmission from the ground controller to the pilot of the Delta jet was ambiguous because it did not specify which of two similarly numbered runup pads was to be used as a holding point.
- The flight crew of the Delta jet did not request clarification of the ground controller's ambiguous transmission.
- Flightcrews and controllers at O'Hare terminal area both deviated from prescribed communication procedures.
- The captain of the North Central plane was operating under a valid clearance for take off.
- Neither the local controller nor the flightcrew of the North Central jet was aware of the proximity of the Convair 880 to the cleared runway.

From the findings the board reached conclusion that the failure that caused the crash was centered on the fact that no one tried to verify the location of the Delta jet while it was taxing. For this, it blamed both the controllers and the crew of that jet for not using necessary radar equipment and not getting clarification on radio transmissions.

TO PREVENT further incidents of this type, the board is recommending the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) take the following steps:

- Require flightcrews to report their aircraft positions on the airport when establishing radio communications with controllers.
- Require controllers to read back the reported aircraft position when it cannot be verified either visually or by means of radar.
- Requore flightcrews to read back taxi clearances when operating in visibilities of less than one-half mile.

The board also recommended the FAA look into finding improved ways of giving visual guidance to emergency exits as well as more efficient methods of indicating the location of such exits in dark or smoke-filled environments.

There was some question raised as to whether or not passengers on the DC-9 were able to see the exits of the aircraft when filled with smoke. Some board members were of the impression that had the exits been more readily seen, more people may have survived the crash.

Miss Schaumburg Cowboy contest

The Schaumburg Cowboys will sponsor a Miss Schaumburg Cowboy competition open to 13-to 14-year-old girls in the Northwest suburbs.

The contest is being held in conjunction with the group's rodeo. Proceeds will go to help build the Schaumburg branch of Rush-Presbyterian - St. Luke's Medical Center.

Girls interested in entering the competition must write a 100-word or less composition on "What Youth Activities Your Community Needs" and send it to Peggy Kosin, 504 Slingerland Dr., Schaumburg. She is chairman of the Miss Schaumburg Cowboy committee.

The essays, handwritten or typed, must be mailed to Mrs. Kosin by Aug. 31. An interview will be conducted Sept. 7 at Schaumburg's Great Hall with all participants.

The girls will be judged on appearance, personality and community involvement. This is not a beauty contest.

The final winner will be notified Sept. 10. She will receive a $50 savings bond, a cowgirl outfit of her choice and the honor of opening the three rodeo shows.

The rodeo will be presented at the DuPage County Fair Grounds Sept. 21 and 22 at 7:30 p.m. and Sept. 23, at 1:30 p.m.

Tickets are now on sale for $2.25 per adult (16 years of age or over), $1.25 per child (4 years of age or older) and $7.50 for a family. Tickets are available at the Schaumburg State Bank, Woodfield Bank and the First State Bank of Hanover Park.

Land values are rising everywhere but there are some places where the price of land is so high that it is famous. One of these is the city of London, England. It is worth approximately $1,250 dollars per square foot. This surpasses even Wall Street in New York City. There land can be bought for approximately $1,000 dollars per square foot. The French vineyards are also extremely valuable although their value has not recently been estimated.

Call GEORGE L. BUSSE & CO., 12 E. Busse Ave., 259-0200 with your listing for an honest free estimate of value; your property may be worth more than you think. Student Body's Almanac Nostalgia prompts a look at today's back-to-school styles in yesteryear's settings. Here's an almanac of fashion ideas to improve the outlook of every student body.

a. Elegant is the word for this off-white pantsuit worn by Debbie Mandarino. Available at Place One in Palatine, the outfit is 100 per cent Acrilan® and completely washable. The International Boutique set, featuring a shawl collar and two pockets, sells for $30.

b. Burgundy is a bright color for fall casual wear, used here in herringbone ·· polyester flared pants. Leona Bieze completes her total look with a turtleneck long sleeve shell, both part of a grouping from Koret of California sold at Lorraine Ann in Arlington Heights. Adding the extra touch is a cardigan by Cos-Cob.

c. Argygle sweaters have returned to the scene and Blaine Hemphill likes this one in red, blue and beige. The all-orlon model by Alps is $20. Paired with the sweater are navy all-polyester knit slacks with wide cuffs ($14). Both are available at Svoboda Sons Men's Store in Arlington Heights.

d. Jackets are popular with school children this fall and Hagenbrings in Arlington Heights has several styles on hand. Jane Scanlan chose a corduroy pandora ensemble of 100 per cent cotton in dark green and navy plaid, accented with a yellow blouse. Instead of the four-gore skirt, Jane could wear cuffed pants or a jumper. Jacket sells for $17, the skirt for $10. Tim Russow's outfit of brown heather plaid is 50 per cent dacron polyester and 50 per cent cotton. Prices vary according to sizes.

e. Studies may go quicker in a comfortable pantsuit from Maxim's in Mount Prospect and Schaumburg. This rust outfit ($36) is trimmed in blue with an attractive navy-style collar and zip front. It is available in the Mount Prospect store, while the gypsy wig ($45) is at both locations.

WHEN IT COMES time to burn the midnight oil, coeds can do it in comfort with this navy calico quilted robe worn by Ann Sale. White trim and pink velvet bows add the finishing touches to this polyester and cotton machine washable robe. It is available in sizes 7 through 13 at Undercover Boutique at Woodfield. It is priced at $30.

Schools stress reading skills

That too many youngsters are unable to read properly at their own grade level has inspired a nationwide frontal attack on the problem.

More and more educators agree that individualized instruction, with each child setting his own pace, is one of the best ways of coping with reading problems.

In some areas teen-agers work as volunteer "teachers" in the lower grades of their own schools.

The "open corridor" classes have reported reading gains using the "informal" approach to education.

In some schools children write simple stories and then speak them into tape recorders. As they listen to the playback, words seem to become more pertinent to their own life experiences.

Some classrooms have adopted audio-visual programs where the child sees a picture, hears a sound, then must select the correct word — from several choices — before going on to the next picture.

Study facilities: a learning plus

To young people all over the nation, September means the end of a long and pleasant vacation. Time for a change, so they are eagerly looking forward to returning to school and to classmates they haven't seen all summer.

To get them off to a good start and to encourage good study habits parents can help by providing well equipped, properly lighted and cheerful facilities.

Providing good study conditions need not be difficult or expensive and often may involve simply the rearrangement of a student's room. Any area selected must invite concentration and be conducive to the development of proper study habits.

Educators recommend that the basic equipment for study include a desk, drawer space, a portable typewriter, a straight-back chair and adequate lighting.

Lighting experts suggest a pair of wall lamps or a single study lamp which provides a high level of light uniformly distributed over the study area.

To take advantage of maximum reflected light, the desk should be located against a wall that is plain and light in color. Avoid walls covered with a busy distracting wallpaper or a dark color.

The desk and chair should be high enough so that the student can sit erect with both feet squarely on the floor. A straight-backed, upholstered chair is recommended.

CUFFED PANTS ARE the thing for coeds this year, as Jeanine's in Mount Prospect shows. Red polyester gabardine is used in Sunny Wood's pants (left) with matching battle jacket. Pants are $28 and the jacket $32. Jeryl Layer (right) prefers a burgundy pin strip outfit with belted jacket. Pants are $28 and the jacket $34. Long sleeved white turtleneck sweaters worn with both outfits are $14.

The sweater look goes back to school this fall

What do you suppose the jeans set will be wearing back to school this fall? Jeans, for a starter, but that's not all. Shirts have had it, "they" say, so teenagers are looking for new and better ways to express themselves, fashionably.

A logical sequel to the shirt-tale is the sweater, but how it's changed. Hard to believe there ever was a time when sweaters were worn simply for warmth. This season, they are gayer and less serious than ever.

Some go to extremes of leanness as if you'd bought them a size too small, whple others loom to coat proportions. The lean ones literally stick to your ribs while the others wrap you in a woolly bearhug.

Skinny sweaters are meant to be worn at least two at a time, or as layers of carefully nonmatched patterns in harmonizing colors, as a slightly jazzy sweater set. Imagine a zippy lemon colored set combining a V-necked cardigan with short sleeves, orver a matching long-sleeve pullover, both in a flat-finished acrylic that clings to every inch of you.

The news in cardigans this Fall is the short sleeve. This looks fresh and young, and leads happily to layering. In addition to rich autumn shades of walnut, cranberry, or spruce, there's a full range of pastels too.

Girls who like to knit or crochet will have a field day with the new seater patterns. Argyle and Fair Isles patterns are available at your favorite yarn shop as well as 1973 directions for knit-two, purl two versions of the classic shawl-collared cardigan worn by members of every first team.

If you can't make a knitted top from scratch, how about recycling a piece of discarded clothing? An old vest your father used to wear can be converted into a smashing vest for you.

Take in the sides until it fits properly. Cut off those edges holding buttons and buttonholes, and bind them with embroidery or braid. A pullover discarded by a big brother can become your favorite bulky cardigan. Roll up the cuffs until they're the right length for you, and stitch the rolls into place.

Cut the sweater body down the middle, using several rows of machine stitching at each raw edge to prevent raveling. Finish the edges with matching binding, or to complete your new fashion picture, use bluejean material cut for this trim.

SEWING OUTFITS like these are much easier today than when the spinning wheels was used. A navy and off-white plaid knit material and patterns from Stretch and Sew in Arlington Heights were used for doublebreased sleeveless jumpers for Anne (left) and May Carrier. Brother Dean sports plaid pants with matching tab-front shirt.

Back-to-school bicyclists should heed safety rules

The thrill of going back to school coupled with a new bike to ease the travel can sometimes be exhilarating for a youngster — so exhilarating, in fact, that it often crowds out all thoughts of safety rules for young cyclists.

Here's a suggestion for parents from the American Automobile Association, "Treat the back-to-school gift of a new bike as you would a Christmas present. Prepare a safety code for safe operation and then tie it othe handlebars with a bright red ribbon."

Careless operation of bicycles combined with the increasing number of motor vehicles on the road has resulted in a tragic soaring of bicycle mishaps. In 1963, 573 deaths resulted from these accidents, in 1969, there were 820.

Statistics also show that for every cyclist killed in traffic there are 112 injured.

The AAA also warns that parents shouldn't delude themselves into thinking that if their youngsters are no longer small, they're less likely to have an accident. In fact, a recent study by the National Safety Council found that bicycle-motor vehicle accident rate is about 50 per cent higher among youngsters from ten to 14 years old than those below the age of ten.

It appears that most younger cyclists are more likely to ride on sidewalks and other non-traffic areas.

Beyond presenting a "safety code" to youngsters, whether they're receiving a new bicycle or not, parents should remember that when selecting a bike, handlebar grips should be the same height as the saddle and at right angles to the handlebar stem.

The brake system should be of the coaster type — most children aren't strong enough to operate a hand brake effectively.

Parents should also be familiar with local laws affecting cyclists. Some require licensing of bicycles, some forbid their use on sidewalks, and some charge parents with the responsibility for equipping their child's bike with proper lighting and warning devices.

Another important factor is the theft prevention of bicycles. Few experiences are more depressing than to have a child's dream bike disappear. Chains and locks specifically designed to the child's bicycle and parking needs should be considered as a necessary option.

Finally, if there's the slightest suspicion that the child is too immature to take on the responsibility of driving a bicycle safely, parents should possibly consider waiting a year or two before getting him one.

SHARON WELLHAUSEN is all ready for sorority rush in this Glen Plaid two-piece black and white outfit worn with a red turtleneck top. The jacket — trimmed with black braid — features the new bustle back and slightly puffed sleeve for a newer, more feminine look than the tailored blazer. Accordian pleats are more in style than ever and this skirt has plenty! The wool/polyester blend is lightweight enough to be worn in early fall as well as throughout the winter. Available at Marge's Apparel in downtown Arlington Heights, the skirt retails for $23; jacket, $27; and shell, $10.

Background for the back-to-school photographs was provided through the courtesy of the Historical Society of Arlington Heights at the museum and other facilities in Arlington Heights.

Changing times

With today's advanced electronic technology, a student's three R's might be Receivers, Radios and Reactors. Truth is, school has changed a lot and so have accessories for the back to school crowd.

Tape players and recorders, pocket computers, mini computers and who knows what else are slowly replacing pencils, erasers and bookbags as "standard" back-to-the-books equipment.

Some other suggestions for your students might be pre-recorded tapes of language lessons, or any of the wide classifications of educational taped programs.

Several of the complete home educational centers also double in their off hours as hi-fi's, steros, and tape recorders for the whole family to enjoy.

Students given governing voice

Students on governing boards? That's right. Many public four-year colleges have responded to student demand for active participation. Some 20 per cent of them have provisions for student membership on governing boards.

Of the four-year colleges whose governing boards do not involve student participation, a large percentage have alternatives, most frequently a council of students which advises the board.

Student participation on governing boards, a student demand on many campuses for the past several years, was given more credence when the U.S. Congress included in the 1972 higher education bill the statement that, "It is the sense of the Congress that the governing boards of institutions of higher education give consideration to student participation on such boards."

College education boom coming to a quick halt

The boom in the college population has apparently come to an end. College enrollment in fall, 1973 will remain approximately the same as it was in fall, 1972. This decline has come earlier than many observers had predicted.

The fall, 1972 enrollment of 9,204,000 in colleges and universities represented an increase of only two per cent over the previous year's fall enrollment.

Rising costs and a decline of interest in college education have apparently worked together to bring the boom to a halt earlier than expected.

According to the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges, (NASULGC), which represents the nation's largest public institutions, these two factors were cited as major reasons for leveling off of enrollment growth by its members.

Although state and landgrant universities as a whole expect a freshman enrollment increase this fall, some of these institutions are predicting an enrollment decrease.

Financial difficulties for students, brought about by higher charges and a shortage of student aid funds, were cited by these institutions as a major deterrent in student enrollment.

Enrollment decreases are not necessarily a bad thing. For large public universities, which have been pressured to accommodate more and more students over the past dozen years, it will come as a relief.

"A decrease in enrollment will enable us to achieve a more favorable student-faculty ratio," observed Dr. David W. Mullins, president of the university of Arkansas, which expects a 9.5 per cent decrease in freshman enrollment.

There are actually more public universities expecting increases in freshman enrollment than decreases. At new branches of existing state institutions increases are extected to be greater than 20 per cent.

Despite the lessening of admissions pressure, qualified applicants are still being rejected by some state universities.

The bulk of these rejections will go to out-of-state students. Enrollment quotas, a shortage of classroom space and institutional financial restraints on enrollment are named as the reasons for institutions turning away many eligible students.

Let breakfast get you going

An alarming number of children are behind their schoolmates before the school day starts.

A report made to a Senate committee studying nutritional problems shows that 24 per cent of children in Massachusetts go to school each day with an inadequate breakfast. Thirteen per cent have no breakfast at all. Only 5 per cent eat a good breakfast.

Studies made at the University of Iowa show that breakfast is the most important meal of the day, because it follows a period of ten to 12 hours or more without eating. The studies showed that those who don't get a nutritionally adequate breakfast are less alert. Their ability to concentrate is lower than others', and their skills tail off late in the morning.

One adequate breakfast, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, includes fruit or fruit juice, cereal with milk, toast and spread, and milk to drink. Other foods can be substituted as the main course for variety.

Dr. Morris Fishbein, noted helath authority, points out: "For most people, the primary factor in food selection is pleasure." One key to getting children to eat a nutritionally sound breakfast, according to the Cereal Institute, is to provide foods they enjoy. The wide assortment of breakfast cereals available makes sure that several will be appealing to every child.

Cereals combine important needed nutrients with flavors and textures that children like.

Improve your education with home study courses

In 1728 one Cabel Phillips ran a notice in the Boston Gazette offering to teach a "New Method of Short Hand — Any Persons in the Country Serious to Learn this Art may be having the several Lessons sent Weekly to them be as perfectly instructed as those that live in Boston."

Correspondence schools have changed a great deal since 1728 (although shorthand is still taught, as well as the updated Stenotype-Machine course). Today several hundred home study schools have more than five million Americans enrolled.

This is about two-thirds as many students as attend all U.S. colleges and universities combined — and each year, another million and a half literally "go back to school" by signing up for new courses.

Subject matter ranges from the standard ones — accounting, college preparatory, drafting, machine shop and trades, management in a wide range of occupations — to the more unusual ones of gemology, finger-printing, medical transcription, waterworks and sewage plant operation, and yacht and boat design. Some 500 different academic, vocational and avocational courses.

The typical student is married, has a family and finds it difficult to leave his job to attend a resident school. It's significant that members of the same family may be taking different correspondence courses at the same time, according to the National Home Study Council — contributing to family togetherness by engaging in a mutual self-improvement project.

Craftsmen and foremen make more extensive use of correspondence courses than any other civilian group. Professional and technical workers are the next major category of users, followed by students working toward high school or college diplomas.

More than 7,500 business and industrial companies rely on home study courses for on-the-job training of their personnel. Students in more than a thousand high schools regularly pursue home study courses on a supervised basis.

Nearly half the adults taking correspondence courses live in smaller communities of less than 50,000 population.

These people are going back to school for a variety of reasons: housewives preparing to enter the job market anew — or learning how to re-enter it; engineers keeping up on advancing technology; mid-career and military personnel preparing for second-careers; employes readying themselves for managerial positions, or school dropouts completing their studies through the mail.

Famous people who have studied through correspondence courses include George Meany, Arthur Godfrey, Agnes de Mille, Charles Wilson (former General Motors president), Harry Golden (newspaper columnist and author), and Stuart Symington, U.S. Senator from Missouri — to name but a few.

The National Home Study Council, the association of 188 leading accredited home study schools, offers a free listing of these eschools and the subjects they teach. For further information write to: NHSC, 1601 18th Street, N. W., Washington, D.C. 20009.

Reading aloud: extra fun when kids act out roles

Reading aloud to children is a special treat for most of them. For very young children, choose a simple poem, and try letting them guess the rhyming words.

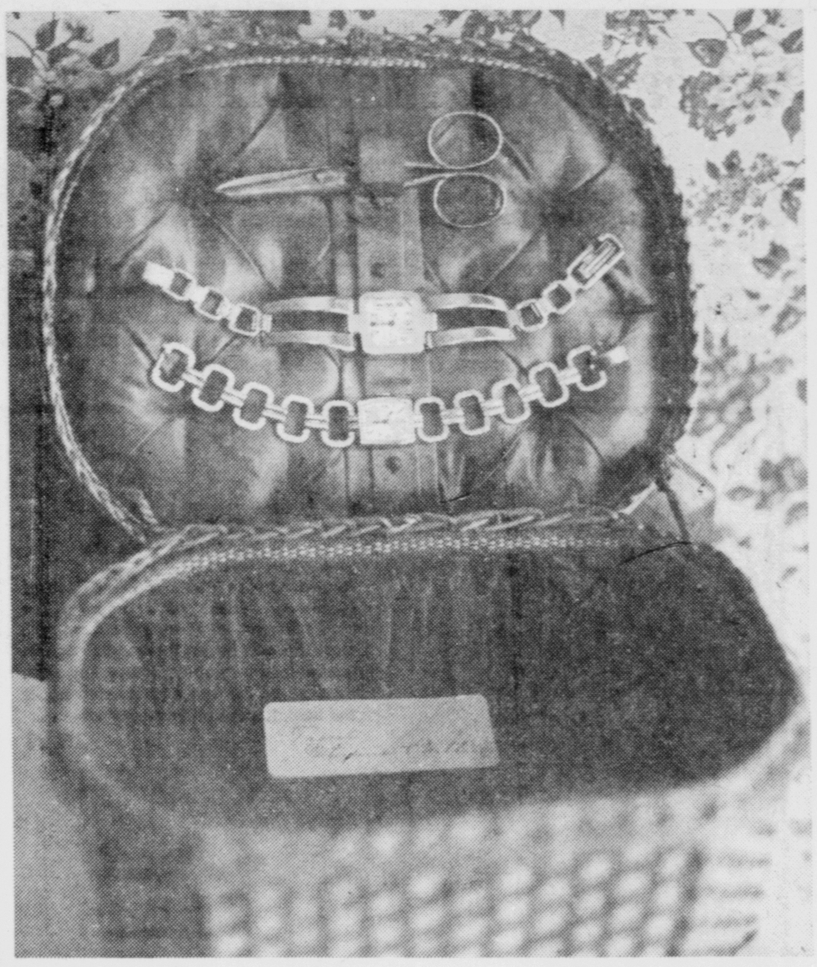
When Choosing a story, select one that you will find as enjoyable as your listeners. If you are reading to a group of children whose ages vary by several years, select material appropriate for the oldest in the group.

The younger the child is, of course, the shorter his attention span. After reading a brief episode, you might have your audience act it out if it seems suitable for role playing, or have them guess at what might happen next in the story.

Boys as a rule are not much interested in stories involving the adventures of the opposite sex. Girls, on the other hand, don't seem to mind stories about boys, but rather find them somewhat intriguing.

There have always been, and hopefully always will be, those very special books that have meaning for persons of all ages: books that can be read on a multitude of levels and are appropriate for both children and adults. It's an adventure worth sharing.

WOOL PLAIDS and polyester knits were made into two-piece outfits with patterns from Minnesota Fabrics in Arlington Heights. A dark brown dress, modeled by Pat Wemstrom (left), is topped by a yellow and brown plaid jacket featuring vented back and large wooden buttons. Mardi Drake (right) turned a dark green and red plaid into a skirt and long-sleeved jacket.



GIRLS LIKE TO have a nice watch when school comes around and the "bracelet" style is quite popular at Flaherty Jewelers in downtown Arlington Heights. Shiny, heavy links distinguish a Le Monde watch (top) with a contemporary shaped face ($34.95). Geneva makes a smaller square face watch (bottom) with textured gold links for $50. Both have easy-to-read large numerals.

'Country-look' headlines on-campus fashion news

Nubby, English country tweeds and big bulky sweaters will pair up this fall to create one of the most personally comfortable, yet feminine, fall fashion stories in years.

What could be better on-campus news than the availability of great "Gatsby"-inspired 1920's slouchy cardigan sweater "sets," full sporty skirts and bulky "Big-coats"?

Gone are the skintight not-so-comfortable little girl armholes that have long prevailed, the generation gap has withered away and now most women are demanding comfortable clothing in practical "classical" sports fabrics.

"Country" music isn't the only "down home" favorite this year either. Coats, one of the most costly fall purchases, show a decided "country"-weekend feeling.

Knowing gals will forsake the narrow skimpy "town" look and choose full, swingy silhouettes. Not only are they more comfortable to wear but think how grand a tweedy topper jacket or full balmacaan will look over layered sports favorites!

The perfect coordinate to this new soft sports look is a more muted, smokey "not so bold" makeup. Gone are the glaring, garish "kooky" eyes of the past; aim now for a more subtle beauty appeal.

How? Primarily with a softer palette of eye colors. New baby frost shadows that smooth onto eyelids like silk and shine without looking like neon.

If you think of your eyes as a most wonderful beauty "accessory," you'll understand why our next fashion suggestion promises to be the hit of the season! If eyes are a girl's prettiest feature (and they are!) then a knitted pull-on cap that draws more attention to them should be the unanimous "Accessory of the Year"!

Yes, there's a marked swing away from fad-folloring one-season fashions and "too bold" look-at-me-makeup; smart consumers will welcome the return to feminine apparel and beguiling soft makeup coordinates.

BEVERLY OF Nina's Boutique, Woodfield and Arlington Heights, wears a green and white check pantsuit by Carlette. The casual good looks of the 100 per cent polyester outfit is suited well for the classroom, the office or a date. It comes in junior sizes and costs $46.

TEACHERS AND COEDS alike will enjoy this red polyester baseball jacket and pants by Center Stage. Available at Robin's Nest in Mount Prospect, the outfit features cuffed pants and sleeves and is worn with a rose-patterned blouse. Pat Finke models the separates priced at $16 for the jacket, $18 for the pants and $10 for the Laura Mae blouse.

Pedwin.

Return now to those thrilling days of yesteryear. Those days when a cat kept his cool wearing saddle oxfords. Now, Pedwin brings the saddle back. A suede leather goody, heavy on sole, rounded at the toe and stacked up at the heel. It's the only way to ride.

Children find entertainment an education

Televised education is proving that entertainment can help teach children basic skills.

Two of the most popular and most successful programs — Sesame Street and The Electric Company — are receiving similar reviews of praise from students, teachers and evaluators.

Kindergarten and first grade teachers surveyed by the Educational Testing Service in a nationwide study have generally considered their Sesame Street "graduates" to be better prepared than other children entering school for the first time.

ETS also reported that children who watch Sesame Street the most learn the most.

In another study made by ETS, it was found that children who watched The Electric Company in their classrooms during the show's first season made significant gains in reading skills over non-viewers.

The popularity of educational television is by no means limited to the continent of North America. School-age children, and many adults in Africa — daily in the late afternoon, surprisingly — vacate the streets to watch funny animals on educational programs.

Reading skills accelerate with personalized teaching

Open classrooms and individualized instruction are being recognized by more and more school districts as the educational methods which can achieve results in solving reading problems.

COEDS LIKE Marlene Ray can enjoy a lot of movie going in grey heather tweed separates by Aileen. The flared A-line skirt is topped by a zip-front jacket featuring wide ribbed waist, collar and sleeves. The maroon turtleneck accents the flecks in the polyester knit outfit. Found at the Fashion Nook in Palatine, the skirt sells for $12, the jacket for $15 and the top for $9.

New techniques such as self-pacing programmed instructional materials, tapes and talking typewriters are helping schools meet the challenge of combatting illiteracy which in some degree affects one out of every four of the nation's children.

Educators stress that in an individualized reading program, the child has the opportunity to work at his own pace without feeling frustrated about falling behind or without holding back his classmates.

The brighter child also finds this approach to his advantage since he is able to succeed at his own rate.

An effective reading program underlining individualized instruction is known as Project Raad. This program — which uses a programmed linguistic approach — was developed by the noted linguist, Dr. M. W. Sullivan, and the Behavioral Research Laboratories in Palo Alto, Cal.

This personalized step-by-step approach helps a teacher spot precisely what is puzzling the child. The teacher then is free to give him the needed help without impeding the progress of others.

"Learning is made simple in Project Read since it uses phonics and emphasizes decoding in a programmed format," says Roger R. Sullivan, president of Behavioral Research Laboratories.

He explained that in the BRL-Sullivan materials the child learns at first a single sound for each letter. This is to keep him from becoming confused by the complexities of the English language.

The project now is being used by children in school districts across the country and has already taught millions of children to read.

Many Project Read schools around the country have reported positive results. In Inglewood, Cal., over 80 per cent of the first and second graders have made impressive gains.

The Dallas, Texas school district tested four different innovative reading programs during the 1971-72 school year and the largest overall gains were made by students in Project Read.

Philadelphia's District Four initiated Project Read in the fall of 1970 and subsequently its rank in reading achievement in the city greatly improved.

Dr. Ruth W. Hayre, superintendent for that district, said Project Read was implemented in the area because a breakthrough in the teaching of reading was needed.

"Behavioral Research believes that with their method every child has the potential to learn, and we agree," said Dr. Hayre. She recalled that in the beginning "many teachers were skeptical of the program since it called for their having to participate in pre-service training sessions conducted by BRL's special consultants."

"Since this is an individualized approach, our teachers quietly learned they no longer could sit behind their desks, but had to be on their feet providing students with personal assistance," Dr. Hayre said.

Brighten up dull lunches

Mothers, if you're getting reports from school that your youngster isn't eating your home-packed lunch the way he or she should, better search your conscience. When meals are "picked-at" at home, too, you can chalk it up to poor eating habits and initiate firmer discipline at the table.

But if breakfast and dinner are downed with relish, then look to other possible causes for having a nose up at your lunch.

First, it may be that you are in a rut, providing the same old fare day after day. Vary the soup you put in the vacuum bottle; the bread you use for sandwiches; vary the filling and cut the bread into different shapes such as fingers, bite-sized squares and triangles.

A second possible cause for lack of mid-day appetite is the state of lunch box. Because it's closed up tight so much of the time, the interior and all its trappings tend to harbor odors.

Get into the habit of opening the lunch baox as soon as it reaches home. Let the box air out and wash the vacuum bottle and plastic containers.

Gifts to suit the collegian

Tips for under $10 gifts are suited to dorm life, and guaranteed not to be found in even well-stocked suit cases.

1. A roll of gay gift-paper to be used as a lining for drawer or as shelf paper, or for decorating a bulletin board. Add some bows, tags and sticker for any gift wrapping needs that will occur during the semester.

2. Arrange for one of the restaurants in the college town to serve a Sunday dinner "on the house" to your away-from-home student and a friend.

3. A food package will bring rousing hurrahs. Stock it with a tin of date nut bread, sharp cheese that comes packed in a crock, an assortment of crackers, several small jars of jelly.

4. Two pairs of foam slippers, one pair for the walk to the shower, the other for comfortable studying.

5. Guaranteed to brew enthusiasm is an instant coffee set which comes complete with tiny pot, cups, instant coffee, cream and sugar.

6. Three shoe boxes covered with gift wrapping paper make handy what-not boxes when space is limited. On one of the boxes fasten a glove, on another a belt buckle, on the third sew an odd assortment of buttons.

7. A subscription to their hometown newspapers will keep students abreast of the home-front gossip.

8. Night-owls and their roommates will welcome a small reading light that clamps onto a book, or book stand.

9. A double deck of playing cards and tallies for bridge breaks, monogrammed for an added touch. Or a set of one of the new topical games will stimulate the cerebrum painlessly — even enjoyably.

Student individuality: chief educational trend for '70's

Education today is more than chalk and erasers, homerooms and study halls, or slide rules and degrees.

In fact, up and down the academic ladder, teachers, administrators, educational associations, state educational commissions and researchers are considering the possibility that the '70's is a time for students of all ages to be thought of as individual people in quest of knowledge.

Arthur W. Foshay, professor at Teachers College, Columbia University, paints a dramtic picture of education's needs in a special treatise for the "Schools for the 70's program entitled "Curriculum for the '70s: An Agenda for Invention." The program is a responsibility of National Educational Association's Center for the Study of Instruction.

Dr. Foshay writes firmly, "We have run out of alternatives. The school as we know it has a heritage of inhumaneness; instead of treating students as individual human beings, we group, track, segregate, stereotype . . . instead of treating an education as an opportunity for a child to grow into an adult, we treat it as a race for grades and reflect the societal demand for competition.

"From this time forward, the central function of the school should be to make people more fully human, not provide manpower."

The impact of such a system is, of course, only speculative at this point. But many of the 60.4 million persons who will be returning or starting school this year will find forms of unstructured education awaiting them.

For 1972-73 the numbers of earned degrees are almost staggering: Bachelor's and first professional up 55,000 to 958,000; Master's up 18,000 to 256,000; Doctorates — up 3,000 to 38,000.

Although early reports indicate a better job market for college graduates than the past few years, there is still a dilemma for the more educated students with advanced degrees.

The facts of schools producing manpower as opposed to functionally educated prople has been made issue of in major newspaper stories describing the plight of the Ph.D. "Schools, businesses, banks, even community colleges think that a person with a PhD. is overtrained, over-specialized, and likely to be discontented and therefore inefficient in some other employment . . ." reports just one such story.

Nursery schools, grade schools, junior and senior high schools, junior colleges, four-year colleges and universities are discovering that open classrooms, less structured curriculums and more diverse fields of study may just be producing the type of person necessary for the society of the future.

Certainly the great impact of educational television — "Sesame Street" opening its fifth year, "The Electric Company" beginning its second term, among others — is changing early learning.

Significant educational gains, as a direct result of these programs, have also been measured by the Educational Testing Service. Among the key findings: second grade children with reading difficulties now have an effective instructional supplement and there was a generally favorable reaction from teachers who found these programs useful in teaching and reviewing certain reading skills.

Inflexibility in providing the necessary knowledge and skills for the student's chosen interest was cited by youngsters who are either habitual truants or dropouts, according to the National Education Association's Task Force on Compulsory Education.

The Task Force recommends a flexible school timetable. It urges the adoption of amendments to compulsory attendance laws to give individual schools and systems the option of developing alternatives to students' spending specific time in school.

Many big businesses are realizing their need for invólvement in the academic process and contribute their resources accordingly.

The Ford Motor Company, for example, donated more than $3 million worth of automotive equipment to educatonal institutions through the U.S.

This new approach to education, where a seven-year-old may be holding down a job or where taxi drivers could teach social studies classes, calls for a new responsibility on the part of parents also.

Basically, it requires that parents adopt a positive feeling that their children can make it in school, but that they should not have unreasonable expectations for the child.

Furnish student's room from practical viewpoint

Back-to-books time means a special place indoors that can be a whole world for your child. Although furnishing for your offspring if far from child's play, it can be rewarding for both of you if you give the right consideration to both the practical and the enjoyment points of view.

First of all, remember that keeping house is not a student's favorite occupation, so the room should be easy to keep clean and neat.

This rule of thumb is not only self-defense for Mother, but it might even encourage tidy habits in the offspring. Furthermore, it should be able to take a beating without creating problems in return.

Finally, it has to be versatile: as a youngster's domain, the room must serve as dining room, playroom, study and storage room as well as bedroom.

Plenty of storage space will help encourage tidiness. By making it part of the architectural element of the room, with clutter literally shelved, possessions and paraphernalia can be displayed and painlessly organized at the same time. Wall systems provide shelves, desk and cabinets in highly adaptable and flexible combinations.

Many wall units can be moved around at will, an important factor for young people who get bored with living with the same surroundings all the time.

You have probably found out by now that youngsters are highly individualistic. In the matter of the style of their private domain they should be encouraged in their own likes and dislikes, and just because you may have the rest of the house in Early American is no reason for Junior to like it too.

Colors are another source of interest to young people. Past ten years old, they are quite sophisticated about colors, so let them have their head. Give them what they want and the room can take on an unorthodox charm of their very personal mix.

Whatever the color and texture, make sure it is all very sturdy. Fabrics should be the washable, little-ironing kind. Thanks to today's materials and finishes, surfaces, carpeting, wallcovering and fabrics can be mostly maintenance-free.

The thoroughly modern student's room is one that answers specific needs rather than a setting that plays out a mother's fantasy in terms of doo-dads, ice cream colors and gimmicky accents. A room designed as a private world for play and study is a need as well as a privilege for today's youngsters.

Youngster's room must be versatile

The uniform comes in a wide range of prices and colors, including all the pro team colors.

Sewing own wardrobes stretches coed budgets

Get top grades this fall for going back-to-collee in separates. Then, add several extra bonus points to your fashion score by sewing them yourself!

You'll find that you can make garments at a fraction of their retail store cost if you sew separates and team them up together in unique combinations.

The first step on the way to cutting clothing costs is to select patterns that include various views for several different fashions.

There are numerous wardrobe patterns that have flared skirts, straght-leg pants, tunics, jackets and soft dresses all in one package.

The buying of one pattern for several items is most economical, since the price of one multi-pattern is far lower than the total price for many individual patterns.

With wise coordination of fabrics, a closet full of separates can easily be sewn. Look for multicolored prints and plaids to match up with solid color coordinates.

For example, choose a cropped jacket in a check that can be worn over checked pants (to create a suit look), over solid pants or over a skirt. With interchangeable parts for schooltime outfits you can create the illusion of owning enough fashinns to look fantastic on just a shoestring budget.

When buying fabric, purchase only as much as the back of the pattern suggests.

Sometimes, you can save money by selecting a wider fabric than the pattern recommends and getting less yardage. Many knits come in 54" and 60" widths now and require less than two yards to make a pair of pants.

Careful workmanship when sewing results in more attractive, better made garments.

There's no trick to getting many different looks from several planned separates. All it takes is a little thought about mixing and matching colors, fabrics and designs.

The results are a unique collection of custom-made clothes to fit your back-to-school budget.

School portrait holds memories

It's the start of another school year and time to think about new classes, new friends and new school pictures.

The school photographer will be coming to take a bright, attractive color photo of each child — a keepsake picture of school days. These reasonably priced photographs of your children are ideal gifts for out-of-town relatives, particularly grandparents, and close friends. Large prints can be framed for the family room at home.

Another delightful way to keep school photographs is in a memorabilia box. This sectioned box — designed for souvenirs of all kinds — is sold in department stores. After each section is filled with a school photograph of each child, it can be hung on the wall.

You will be notified of the day the school photographer is to arrive. If you plan to place the photographs in a memorabilia box or hang them as a group on the wall, you might want to dress two or more children in a coordinated color scheme or in their school, band, or activity uniform.

A PIANO KEY design around the collar and sleeves lends accent to this black nylon dress worn by Lee Ann Davidheiser. The black and beige canvas shoulderbag provides nice contrast to the outfit. The dress sells for $40 and the shoulderbag for $12 at Muriel Mundy in Arlington Heights.

Individual studies assure students better educations

Four years of high school, then four years of college . . . a major field of study plotted out in the college catalog . . . course requirements for graduation . . . courses carefully separated by subject boundaries.

These are traditional earmarks of higher education which many state colleges and universities are challenging in an attempt to make education more meaningful and effective.

Efforts to insure that each student receives the best education for his individual needs have led to many pilot and experimental programs: transitional years, three-year degrees, learning contracts and unstructured degrees.

Some 85 students at State University College of New York at Fredonia are overcoming the usual time requirements for college by earning freshman credit while they complete their high school credits for graduation.

During this "transitional" year, high school seniors earn college credit for studies on campus and in the high school. At the same time, their college work is credited to a high school diploma.

The "transitional" year eliminates a year of college study, plus much of the repetition some freshmen say exists in the first year following high school.

Learning at Governors State University in Illinois is no longer measured in lock-step courses, but rather in terms of objectives in the form of "learning modules."

The module may be a seminar, a series of lectures, a project, an experiment, independent study, or a combination. It may last a few days, a few weeks, or an entire year.

The modules cross departmental boundaries, are often coordinated by a team of teachers. They are individual and self-paced through the use of technical aids such as cassettes and slides.

Modular learning is also used at West Virginia's Marshall University, where students receive written descriptions of what they'll be expected to learn and where they can find the information. The program involves no lectures, scheduled exams or classes. When a student thinks he is ready, he presents himself for an examination.

A new freshman unit at Grand Valley State College, Michigan, makes students and their tutors responsible for developing their own course of study for the academic year. Studies are based on experiende in the field.

Another experimental program depending on field experience is being conducted at Mankato State College, Minnesota. The program consists of on-the-job training with an employer sponsor and course work at Mankato.

Juniors and seniors spend eight to nine months on the job and summers on campus.

Rather than the traditional specialization in one subject, a new baccalaureate degree at California State University, Fullerton, consists of inquiry-oriented studies which cut across academic lines.

The B.A. in liberal studies, for instance, is designed for students who want to focus on a particular issue — environment and society, urban poverty, or law, justice and society.

Programs to fit student needs, rather than students conforming to program requirements, are the goal of these self-selection studies.

At St. Cloud State College in Minnesota, students may take as many classes as they wish, at any level, in any subject area. The only requirement for graduation is a minimum number of credit hours.

Students at William Patterson College of New Jersey may create their own majors, choosing courses from as many areas as they wish. The only requirement for these self-designed majors is that the student have a plan and unity of purpose.

AMERICAN GIRL shoes for class and dress wear are available at Arlington Bootery in downtown Arlington Heights. The black and white saddle (left), so popular in the 40s and 50s, is back but different with higher cushion crepe heel and bubble toe ($14.99). A dressey tie with lock heel comes in navy patent ($14.99).

Home reference library helps pupil with studies

Reference books in your home will mean a lot to your children in the coming school years. Educators often note that a child's success in school is closely related to the books his parents have in their home library.

Back-to-school time is a good time to review your family's reference resources, particularly to see if the books are current and up-to-date on facts. Then, when your children have questions or homework assignments, they will have reliable help right at hand.

The core of any home reference library is an up-to-date, respected encyclopedia. There are many sets of widely varying qualities available but you will get your top dollar value if you insist on a top quality encyclopedia — and your best buy doesn't need to be the most expensive encyclopedia on the market.

Before you buy, check with independent, reliable sources. General Encyclopedias in Print, an independent information service for consumers, is available at your local library. While there, ask your librarian for her opinions and look over the encyclopedias you are considering. Your children's teachers are also excellent guides in your selection.

Select an encyclopedia with a long-standing reputation for excellence and revision. Annually revised editions provide up-to-date, accurate and interesting information.

Compare various encyclopedias for indexing, writing style and interesting, useful illustrations.

Consider the money you are investing in your encyclopedia. Prices vary as widely as qualities.

Finally, does the publisher stand behind its publications?

Insist on quality. Check independent, reliable sources. Look for long-standing reputations and up-to-date revisions. Check indexing, writing style and illustrations. Consider costs and guarantees.

A quality encyclopedia will be a lasting investment for your family.

Two way street

The first nationwide bicultural, bilingual television program for children will be launched this fall. The half-hour, Spanish-and-English programs, aimed at preschool through third grade, will be aired on some 230 stations of the Public Broadcast Service Network Mondays through Fridays.

The series, as yet unnamed, is expected to rival "Sesame Street" in basic child appeal. It has already been endorsed by the National Education Association.

Creative arts play important role in child's growth and development

Creating something of one's own is a triumph, a self-satisfaction we deserve and can get no other way.

To create is to release, to relieve, and because this is so, art experience has been recognized as therapy. It is an aid to growth, mental health, and learning.

When we use the word "art" here, it is inclusive of all the forms: music, dance, theater, visual art.

Native abilities in these arts are apparent in early childhood, but when the actor in a six-year-old appears, he is told, "Don't be silly;" when a little girl dances to the music she hears, we say, "How cute! Now that's enough" or a parent seizes on these natural evidences and says "My child is gifted. I must give him lessons."

The lessons are concerned with development of skills and demand practice and time the child is reluctant to give. Sometime the lessons kill the natural interest he earlier expressed, and nothing, except perhaps dislike, comes of the expensive lessons.

So the artist within us is put down and forgotten because the real business of life requires practical skills and knowledge.

If there were recognition that this power to create rests within all of us and, more than that, that it needs to be used, art experience could be part of every child's life.

Instead, we find an attitude on the part of many adults that art is only for the gifted and a waste of time and money for all others.

Few see that developing the artist in each does not mean forsaking the practical, but contributing to and making the practice of the practical more effective.

We find teachers who are not aware of the artist's existence in every child, who do not recognize the artist in themselves.

How can they provide opportunities for children to express when they themselves are fearful of expressing? What can be done to change this condition?

The obvious answer is a new attitude towards the arts, seeing them as a means to growth and development, not always an end in themselves; to see art as necessary for complete education.

Art is produced out of feeling, and the education available to our children is concerned with intellect. How can this be complete education when it does not consider the motivating force, feeling?

Any kind of personal expression demands self-discipline, self-direction, imagination, concentration. There must also be conviction that the capacity to express exists.

This demands a different kind of teacher preparation — the opportunity for the student who would be a teacher to first discover his own artistic abilities. He should be helped to see that techniques and mastery of an art form are not essential for the lay artist.

Creativity is born in us. It is a common need to impress the self on the environment.

If our early efforts to impress by self-expression are discouraged, scorned, we withdraw, we stop making the effort, because the fear of scorn or disapproval is greater than the need.

Did some grown-up look at the picture you drew when you were six or seven and say, "What's that?" Did a music teacher conducting chorus rehearsal say "Who is that singing off key?" Did you forget your lines in the assembly play?

The idea that the lay person, in order to express, must be a skilled craftsman should be scrapped, and the idea that the making of a poem, a song, a dance, a sculpture, is possible for all — on one condition. The barriers of fear and inhibition must be let down.

How do these barriers come down? The first step is to recognize what put these barriers up: shattering failures of all kinds, efforts to express discouraged by adults and peers.

Second, somebody's confidence that they are removable, and somebody providing the challenge to try again. Then the opportunity to discover the joy in creating.

Because creation does not demand technique, but rather effort and self-discipline, the child or adult would be able to transfer this self-mastery to academic subjects.

His success in the area of expression would give him confidence to face up to the less attractive forms of learning.

Growing children need regular bedtime hours

With the change in season from summer to fall, the readjustment of school-age children to more regulated bedtime hours frequently becomes a problem.

In the summer months, children may become accustomed to going to bed later and sleeping later. Before making the switch back to early-to-bed, early-to-rise, parents should give some thought to how much sleep each child really needs.

This advice comes from the Serta Sleep Center, the public service division of the makers of Serta Perfect Sleeper mattresses and foundations.

These bedding experts say that a child of six through eight should have about 12 hours of sleep; a nine-through-eleven-year-old around 11 hours, and a 12-year-old, around ten hours.

Teen-agers tend to minimize the importance of sleep, but their still-growing bodies do require at least eight hours worth. They stress, however, that these are average sleep requirements, and should be adapted to the individual needs of each child.

A youngster's state of health and amount of activity may have a strong effect on his sleep requirements. It's better to encourage a little more sleep than the average, rather than less.

Several days before school starts, the parents should explain to the younger child that he will soon have to get up earlier and will have to go to bed time. The child should be told at what time he will be expected to go to bed and the parent and child should check the clock together at that hour.

Encourage the child to anticipate this time by asking him shortly before bedtime what time it is. In this way the child will develop the good habit of regulating his bedtime by himself. This is also a good way to teach very young children how to tell time.

Activity for several hours before bedtime should be moderate to avoid overstimulation. Reading, quiet games or conversation, a leisurely bath or a glass of warm milk right before bedtime help to relax the child and prepare him for sleep. Avoid TV shows that tend to excite.

Homework assignment time should be set aside in the late afternoon or early evening so that the youngster will be finished before bedtime and does not use homework as an excuse to stay up later.

Be sure the child's mattress is comfortable and of the right degree of firmness. Parents should not make the mistake of giving their children a hand-me-down mattress, for a lumpy, tired mattress that does not support properly can cause restlessness.

During the growing years a mattress with the proper support is vitally important to good health and good posture.

Once the child is in bed, parents should not give way to unreasonable requests for attention or diversion. One final check to see that youngster is ready for sleep, along with an affectionate "goodnight," should settle the issue. If the child persists in staying awake, more firmness is required.

One last word of advice from the Serta experts. Don't worry if your child doesn't make the adjustment to an earlier bedtime immediately. The necessity to awaken earlier will eventually help him reach his own personal, comfortable sleeping schedule.

OXFORDS AND SADDLE shoes are available for school children at Kenard's in Arlington Heights. A multi-color oxford by Weber (left) teams with a blue and tan patch leather oxford by Miss Lazy Bones (right). In the center is a bone and navy saddle from Lazy-Bones which has a cushion crepe sole. All come in wide widths.

Painting gives hours of creative fun to children with rainy-day-blues

Every child loves to use his imagination playing with paints, and experts tell us that it's an ideal way to encourage a youngster's natural creativity.

It's also one sure way to keep the small fry happy when rainy, blustery fall weather keeps them indoors. And when the older children march importantly off to their exciting life at school, a special day of painting can help boost the egos of tinier family members left at home.

Parents who want to encourage their child's creativity shouldn't try to direct his efforts, but let him paint as he wishes and develop in his own way. Otherwise, not only will his natural talents be stymied, but he'll be robbed of the joy that self-expression brings.

Parents should also remember not to unwittingly project adult standards onto children's efforts. For example, let a child draw a table in his own way — what difference does it make if it's lopsided, three-legged, or totally lacking in perspective?

Your child is doing things in his own special way and developing confidence in himself. Don't destroy that by implying that his way is wrong.

Most art teachers believe that children develop best when encouraged to create in their own way. They have more confidence, and develop a feeling for color and texture. They don't worry as much about other people's standards, so they're less inhibited.

Best way to start your youngsters off on a painting session is to cover a large table with protective layers of newspaper, then assemble paper, paint pots, and small containers for water.

Instead of brushes, use "Q-Tips" cotton swabs, one of the most frequently-used nursery tools. They're easy for children to use, a separate cotton swab for each color cuts down on messy water swishing, and, because they're disposable, there's no need for cleaning and storing away.

Now everything's ready — but what to paint? If your youngsters run out of ideas of their own, here are a few suggestions to get them started, creatively:

Paint what you can see out of your window — or out of the kitchen window or living room window.

Paint your own portrait on the wall. That is after Mother has covered the wall with sheets of shelf paper, attached with masking tape for easy removol later.

Learn how to mix colors. Make it a game with Mommy. Yellow plus blue suddenly turns into green; red plus yellow becomes orange; lighten shades by adding white; the list is almost endless.

Paint a family portrait — Mother, Dad, brothers, sisters, and of course the dog, cat, gerbils, fish or whatever.

Paint a feeling: How does it feel when you go to the circus? How does it feel when you have to get a shot at the doctor's? Or waiting for a surprise? Or visiting the supermarket?

Make a collage. 'Best idea is for Mother to have a pre-assembled "collage box" containing small pieces of cloth and paper in various colors and designs, bits of yarn and ribbon, parts of pictures from magazines, pieces from magazines, pieces of multi-shape uncooked macaroni, anything in varying textures, colors and designs.

Children love to paste together combinations of these items — "Q-Tips" cotton swabs make good disposable paste applicators, too. Collage and paint also can be combined in imaginative ways.

Stitchin' time

by JOANNE SCHREIBER

Erica Wilson has a lucky number, it's undoubtedly seven. In her elegant new book, "Erica Wilson's Embroidery," she identifies, describes and illustrates the seven basic types of embroidery. It is those seven forms of needlework which have made her the unchallenged champion in the hand-needlework world, have brought her from her native England to New York, to marriage with a talented designer, three children, several homes, and an enviable career as teacher, artist and writer.

Erica Wilson is contagiously enthusiastic about every form of needlework, and finds the historical backgrounds as colorful and fascinating as the stitches themselves. She defines embroidery as "everything you can do with a needle on any material including canvas," and takes her historical references from the Bible, from Chaucer and Shakespeare, from museums, from ancient Egypt and China, from armored knights in the Middle Ages, from Elizabethan England and colonial America. Fine needlework traces the course of history, and — if you know the language — may be read as clearly as any history book.

MISS WILSON'S first love may be crewel. At any rate, it was the subject of her first book, and is given the place of honor in her new book as the first of the seven kinds of embroidery. Crewelwork is defined as embroidery with wool thread, and has been done since the earliest history of man. She breaks it down into seven basic stitches (the magic seven again), which are stem, satin, chain, cross, back, weaving and filling. These stitches and their variations fill nearly 80 pages of the 368-page book.

Needlepoint is the second embroidery form, and its origin is traced back to 13th century Saxony and various medieval tapestries, including the famous church linen known as the Hildesheim Cope.

Embroidery in silk and gold threads is the third category and has the firmest foothold in antiquity. Many magnificent examples survive; today, gold embroidery is done with lurex.

Next comes black work, a delicate needlework which uses black silk and gold thread on cream linen. It originated in Spain and was very popular in Elizabethan England.

White work requires the most skill, for it is done with white thread on a white background. Variations on white work have been found in almost every country.

The seventh category is a combination of monograms, applique and shisha work, a type of needlework done with mirrors in India. Applique, especially, lends itself to modern interpretation.

The book is a beautiful production, with 32 color plates and countless line drawings done by Erica Wilson's husband. The tone is friendly and encouraging, the directions explicit, and the enthusiasm genuine. This is a fabulous book for beginning embroiderers, a splendid reference work for skilled needleworkers. Best of all, it is fascinating to read.

(Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

WHEN THE SAME subject is interpreted in different embroidery styles, the results are dramatically different. From "Erica Wilson's Embroidery," these are classic examples of fine white work and raised stump work.

ESPECIALLY FOR THE FAMILY

Linda Anderson, groom studied at Vancouver

Linda Margaret Anderson and her bridegroom, Dan Thomas Curry, both studied at Vancouver Bible Institute in Surrey, British Columbia, and Dan is employed part time by Cumberland Baptist Church in Mount Prospect where he is in charge of youth work.

Linda, a 1970 graduate of Forest View High School, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon E. Anderson, 1507 W. Golf Road, Mount Propsect, and Dan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew C. Curry of Buena Park, Calif.

Dan works full time at Lutheran General Hospital and Linda works at Barnaby, Des Plaines.

The couple repeated their marriage vows July 21 in Mount Prospect Bible Church in a 7 p.m., candlelight, double ring service. They honeymooned in Missouri and Indiana and are now making their home in Des Plaines.

LINDA CHOSE A white cotton gown with shirred bodice and full sleeves with wide eyelet cuffs. Eyelet lace also trimmed the sleeves, the collar and hem of her floor-length gown. Her veil was held in place by a cluster of stephanotis and ivy, and she carried white stephanotis, roses, Austrian statice, purple asters and ivy. She also wore a cameo pin at the neckline of her gown, a gift from her bridegroom.

Susan Kopf, Des Plaines, was maid of honor, and bridesmaids were Linda's sisters, Lois Levin, Chicago and Carol Gordon, Dover, Pa., Don's sister, Denise Curry, Buena Park, and Linda Bogard and Cindy Schloatman, both of Palatine.

The girls wore floor-length Empire gowns of lavender dotted Swiss trimmed in lace, and carried purple asters, stephanotis, roses, statice and baby's breath with ivy. Their headpieces were clusters of ivy and baby's breath.

JUNIOR BRIDESMAID was 10-year-old Tami Jo Hultgren who was also in lavender dotted Swiss, and flower girl was Mary Ila Johnson, 5, Des Plaines. Mary Ila, wore a long, white eyelet pinafore over her lavender dotted Swiss gown.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan T. Curry

Junior usher was Timothy Hultgren, 12, and ring bearer was Randall Hultgren, 7, both of Park Ridge.

Don Curry, brother of the groom from Buena Park, was best man and ushers were the groom's brother, Wendell Curry, Buena Park, Daniel Levin, Chicago, Jack Gordon, Dover, Michael Bogard, Palatine, and Richard Blumbing, Deerfield.

Laura Jenkins weds Aug. 3

St. James Catholic Church in Arlington Heights was the setting of a 7 p.m. wedding on Aug. 3 uniting Laura Marie Jenkins of Arlington Heights and Jeffrey A. Sinks of Dayton, Ohio. Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Jenkins, 915 N. Belmont, and Mrs. Albert Sinks of Dayton and the late Mr. Sinks.

Escorted by her father, the bride was preceded down the aisle by her sister Wendy as maid of honor; another sister, Jeannine, as bridesmaid; 3-year-old Leslie Marie Alpha, Mount Prospect, flower girl, and the bride's brother, Richard, 7, as ring bearer.

The groom chose his brother Kenneth as best man and John Randolph Campbell, Colorado Springs, as groomsman. The ushers included his brother, Joel Sinks; Patrick Jenkins, brother of the bride; Paul Szabo, Cleveland; and Steven Sedlis, New York City.

LAURA'S BRIDAL attire was an ivory organza and Cluny lace gown with a Camelot headpiece and three-tiered cathedral veil edged with matching lace. The dress had a tucked front panel edged with lace and accented with tiny covered buttons from the cameo neckline to the hem. Pale blue satin ribbon encircled the Empire waist and cuffed the fitted long sleeves. The softly gathered skirt ended in a cathedral-length train.

Mrs. Jeffrey A. Sinks

The bride's bouquet was a cascade of white roses, white snowdrift, stephanotis and baby's breath.

The maid of honor wore a gown of blue mousseline de soie over large gingham checks, shirtwaist style with a deep neckline edged with a wide ruffle. She carried a cluster of lavender asters, white cornflowers and baby's breath.

THE BRIDESMAID and flower girl wore identically styled dresses except in color. Jeannine's gown was in yellow mousseline over gingham checks, with matching flowers in her bouquet, and the flower girl appeared in pink with a basket of pink asters and cornflowers.

A lawn reception was held under a pink canopy at the Jenkins home immediately after the ceremony.

The bride attended St. John's College, Annapolis, Md., after graduating from Arlington High School. The groom is a graduate of St. John's.

The Home Line

by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: Just out of the hospital after a coronary attack, I've been encouraged by a piece in your column about there being a lemon and pepper marinade to be used as a seasoning instead of salt and peper. As I am now on a low-sodium diet, this could very well be the answer for me.

—Mrs. M.C.H

This, unhappily, is one of those cases where the word "instead" can be misleading. This particular marinade isn't for people on salt-free diets. Most seasonings of this type do contain some salt and one has to actually hunt out seasonings at well-stocked gourmet shops. Until you find one, the use of lemon peel or reconstituted lemon juice will serve rather well in seasoning most things.

Dear Dorothy: I spilled mustard on a navy blue cotton garbardine dress. Cold water did nothing to remove the stain. Any suggestions?

—Anna C. Bolton

One authority recommends working glycerine into the stain and scrubbing it; then pretreating with detergent and laundering. Then, if a stain remains, sponging it with one part rubbing alcohol to two parts water. Another expert suggests soaking the garment in a detergent solution overnight; and should a stain remain to try a sodium perborate treatment.

Dear Dorothy: I bought a big jar of honey for a visiting aunt and now am puzzled as to how to store it — particularly because she'll be back soon and loves the stuff.

—Lillian Epping

Just keep it on the shelf. Should it become crystallized, just remember it isn't spoiled. All you have to do is put the jar into warm water and the honey will return to its clear liquid state.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

Blind date leads pair to the altar

It was on a blind date at Iowa State University, Ames, Iowa, that Linda L. Kokoron and Perry C. Kalen first met, and on July 21 they became Mr. and Mrs. in St. Anne Church, Barrington.

Linda is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Kokoron, 1021 S. Haddow, Arlington Heights, and Perry is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kalen, Davenport, Iowa. A graduate of Conant High School, Linda received her B.S. in child development from Iowa State in May. Perry, who is majoring in photo journalism, is taking time out from his studies for a year and then plans to return to school in Missouri.

The couple's double ring wedding was held at 4 p.m. with Linda wearing a white sata peau Empire gown with high neckline with Venise lace in a bib effect on the bodice and lace around the neckline and the cuffs of the short sleeves. The A-line skirt swept to a court train bordered in three rows of lace. Her veil fell from a lace caplette, and she carried white roses and yellow daisy mums.

KATHY MALLINGER, Duncombe, Iowa, Linda's college roommate, was maid of honor wearing an apricot silk organdy gown. Wearing identical gowns were the bridesmaids, Vicki Ingraham, St. Louis, Linda Boeke, Betterdorf, Iowa, and Elizabeth Stoltz, Ottumwa, Iowa, also college roommates of the bride, and two cousins of the bride, Betty and Susan Bleizeffer of Chicago.

The girls carried yellow daisies and apricot rose buds.

Jeff Cox, 3-year-old nephew of the groom from Champaign, Ill., was ring bearer. David Lemon, Milwaukee, Wis., was best man, and ushers were the groom's brother-in-law, Craig Cox, Champaign, Dean Tjaden, Charles City, Iowa, Steve Johnson, Garner, Iowa, John Kern, Milwaukee, and Gary Molitor, Floyd, Iowa.

A dinner reception for 150 guests was held in the Barrington Knights of Columbus Hall after which the newlyweds honeymooned in Iowa at the summer home of the groom's parents. The newlyweds are now making their home in a mobile home in Ames.

Former Palatine girl married

Springlake, N.C., will be the new home for Mr. and Mrs. Michael McGlothlen who were married July 28 in Gloria Dei Lutheran Church in Des Moines, Iowa.

The bride is the former Sandra Jean Henning, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Henning of Des Moines who previously made their home in Palatine for 10 years. Sandra Jean studied at Palatine High School, but graduated from a Des Moines high school. She recently completed her freshman year at Iowa State University.

The groom, a '72 graduate of the same Des Moines high school, is the son of Mrs. Harold McGlothlen, Des Moines, and the late Mr. McGlothlen. He is a private and a military policeman in the Army, stationed at Fort Bragg, N.C.

SANDRA JEAN wore an open yard yarn and satin gown trimmed in white daisies of varied sizes and she carried red roses and white carnations. Her bridesmaids were her sisters, Jan of Des Moines, and Judy of Urbandale, Iowa. The girls wore blue flocked dotted Swiss dresses with white picture hats, and carried blue carnations and daisies.

Attending the groom were Kent Boehm and Mike Mills, Des Moines, groomsmen, and the bride's brother, John Henning, and Jon Naumann, cousin of the bride, from Kenosha, Wis., as ushers.

A reception at the Clayton House Motel followed the service.

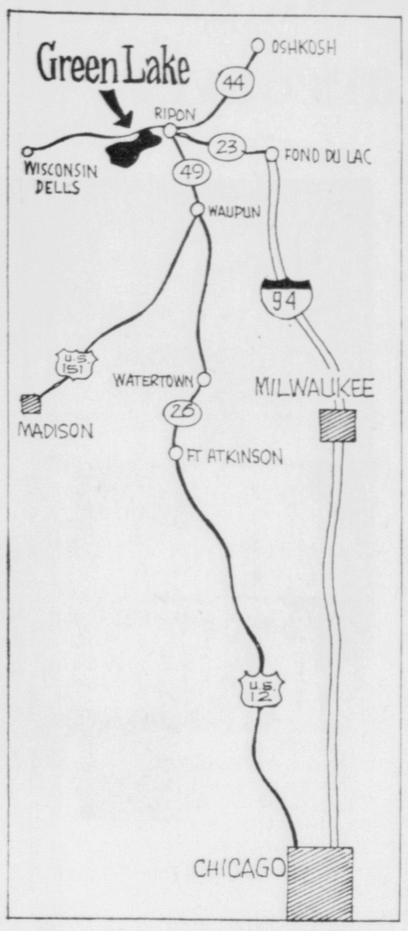
Popular resort escapes over-commercialism

Green Lake: green gateway to nature

by CLARE WRIGHT

GREEN LAKE, Wis. — Here's the kind of place where you can dangle your feet in a cool, clear stream right in the center of town . . . and nobody will care.

"Instant tranquilizer."



That's what the nice lady in Zenda's Swedish Gift Shop called it as she led us to a giant picture window overlooking a serene lakeside scene, complete with waterfall, smack dab in the heart of Green Lake's business section.

There's a small wooded park there too — with a miniature play yard. That day a laughing group of office girls were having a picnic lunch (as they cooled their feet in the refreshing water).

NEXT DOOR the Green Lake Information Center dispenses tourist information on golf, biking, boat tours, fishing, horseback riding and all the water sports at Wisconsin's deepest lake.

Uncluttered — uncomplicated — uncommercial. That's Green Lake.

Its people (1,033 of them) mean to keep it that way. Still they're entirely willing to share their town's many vacation attractions with the right kind of tourists — provided they treat the area kindly and love it as they do.

The utter tranquility of Green Lake struck us about a half hour before we reached it as we lazily meandered along Rte. 23 past sleepy Wisconsin farmlands, with a view of rolling wooded hills in the distance.

There are no big gaudy signs to announce Green Lake. In fact, if you're not careful you might even miss the turn-off.

Yet tourists have been coming to Green Lake since 1867. There was a time when the Chicago and North Western ran three trains a day — with even a parlor car — from Chicago to the Wisconsin vacation retreat.

"SOME OF OUR first visitors were Civil War officers looking for a resort area where they could find rest and relaxation," said a long-time Green Laker.

The same kind of quiet, friendly atmosphere that made Green Lake so popular a century ago is still there today.

How has Green Lake managed to escape over-commercialism — in spite of 100 years of existing as a popular resort?

"Easy," said a shopkeeper along the neat, attractive main street of town.

"We just welcome tourists and vacationers as part of the life of the community . . . and invite them to join in too."

Sounds simple. But it seems to be working.

Some of those community activities include fish boils, flea markets, art shows, street dances, chicken barbecues and summer theater.

While we were there recently we joined a group of local residents to sit in the enormous white barn on the American Baptist Assembly grounds and heard the "Kids From Wisconsin," a brilliant bundle of refreshing young talent that fairly burst the broad beams of the refurbished big barn with their bouncy enthusiasm.

Fishing is great at Green Lake. Trout, bass, walleyes, Northern pike and blue gills. Many of the hotels have boats and guides available.

We checked out McConnell's Marina and learned that for $30 you can have a half-day of fishing for two persons on a roomy pontoon boat ($5 for each extra person) with all tackle and bait furnished — plus a veteran fishing guide.

If you want to stay out all day it's $50.

Bike rental costs $1 an hour, and there are plenty available, judging from the number of vacationers we saw biking through town and countryside.

Should you prefer trotting to pedaling, Green Lake has some of the best riding horses in the Midwest. We got that not "straight from the horse's mouth" but right from a smiling, suntanned young lady vacationer who said she had ridden horses "all over the country" and never found any to compete with the ones at the Lazy L Ranch, where you can hire a good steed for $1.50 for a half-hour — $2.50 for a full hour.

At Green Lake you can also rent motor boats, canoes, sailboats, ski boats and scuba diving equipment.

IF THAT ISN'T enough activity for you — there's tennis, bowling, golf, and — of course — swimming.

Mom will get some of her greatest kicks just wandering through the charming gift, antique and art shops strung throughout the attractive business section.

Nightlife? Very few people go to Green Lake to "live it up." It's not that kind of place.

Still there are supper clubs and places to dance. One of the best is the Rathskellar at the lakeside Heidel House where a lively combo and the "Heidel Honeys" entertain six nights a week.

The Heidel House also has a luxurious excursion boat with around-the lake cruises twice a day. It can also be rented for private excursions, dinner cruises and charter cocktail parties.

What does it cost to vacation at Green Lake? You can reserve a beautiful wooded campsite for as little as $4.50 a day — rent a family cottage on the lake for $60 a week — or stay in a lakeside motel from $12 to $28 a night.

THE BRAND NEW camping sites at the Green Lake Conference Center (American Baptist Assembly) are designed for year-round use and include all the assembly's facilities including biking and nature trails, docking and waterfront areas and swimming in a heated lakefront pool.

Green Lake doesn't close its doors to tourists during the winter. In fact, they're already talking about their upcoming winter festival.

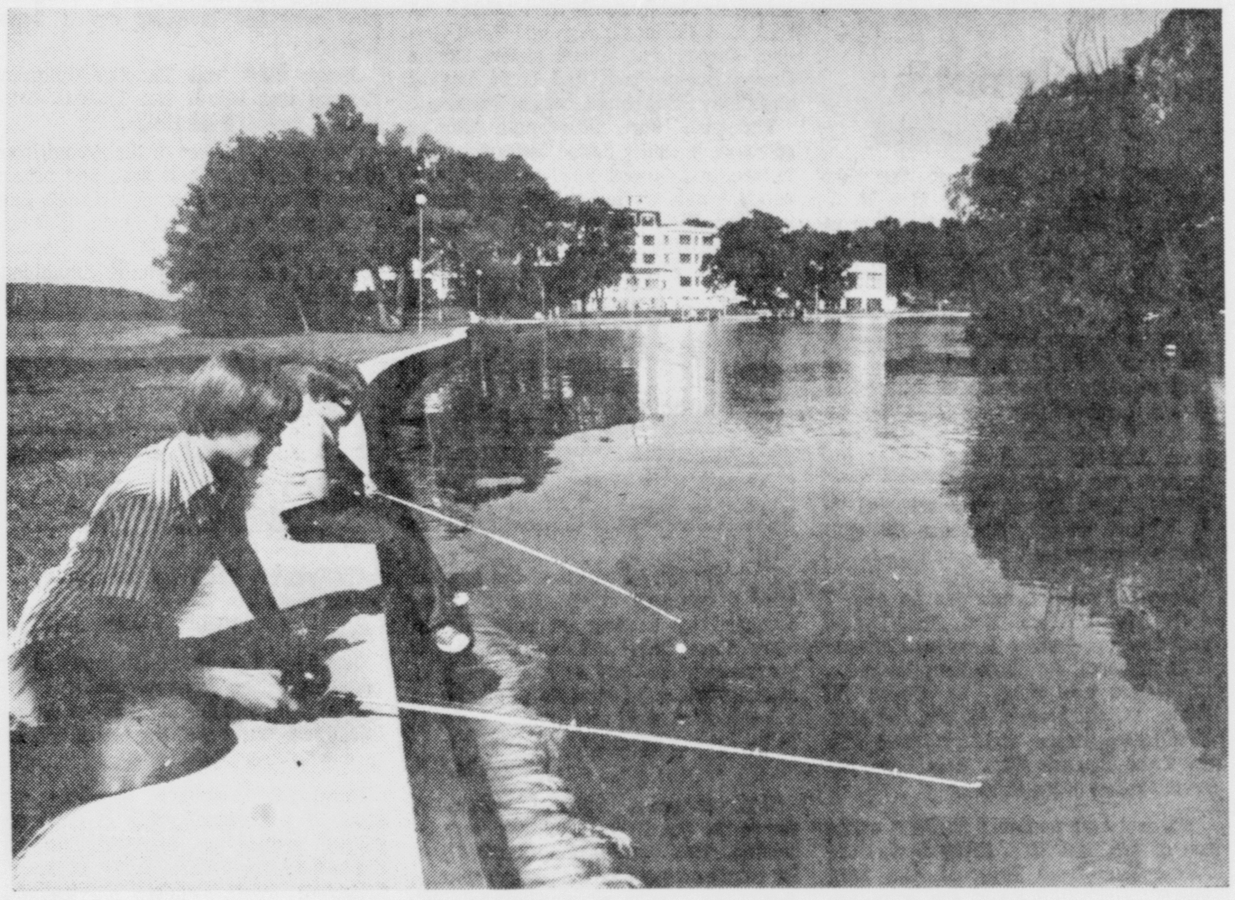
For a brochure, accommodations directory, or specific information, contact the Green Lake Area Chamber of Commerce, Box 78-J, Green Lake, Wis. 54941.

To obtain further information, or make reservations at the Green Lake Conference Center (American Baptist Assembly) year-round camping area, write Frances Lamb, ABA, Green Lake, Wis. 54941.



GREEN LAKE fishing is some of the best in Wisconsin. Noted for its lake trout, the state's deepest lake also contains almost every kind of fresh water fish, except muskie and sturgeon. Pontoon boats and fishing guides are available daily.

World's first mountain 'bicycle trail' ahead

The very first mountain trail for bicycles ever built in Europe is now under construction is Norway. It stretches literally across the "Roof of Norway," since it runs across the Hardanger mountain plateau at an elevation of up to 4,000 feet between Haugastol and Myrdal.

Equally remarkable is the international work gang that builds the road — because it is made up of young volunteers aged 18 to 35 years. They are strictly amateurs, but all are members of the youth hostel association in their own country. The work gang consists of 75 members, both male and female, including some young Americans. The road project was started in 1971, and turned into such a popular venture that over 1,700 youngsters from 11 countries wanted to enroll last year.

American and Canadian youth hostelers wishing to participate in 1973, should write before June 15 to the Norwegian Youth Hostel Association, Dronningensgate 26, Oslo 1, Norway. Information about many other unusual vacations in Norway is available from Scandinavian National Tourist Offices, 505 Fifth Avenue, New York NY 10017 and 3600 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90010.

SCUBA DIVING is great at Green Lake, just 2½ hours and less than a tankful of gas away from the Northwest suburbs.

THE MILITARY used to be Hawaii's chief source of income, but tourism is now moving into first place, followed by sugar cane and pineapple. By 1978 the state expects three million tourists annually, a number more than four times greater than its current permanent population of 700,000.

PHOENIX'S Pueblo Grande Museum, in Arizona's all-year Valley of the Sun resort area, is one of the few outstanding remains of the 14th century Hohokam civilization. The museum-ruins are located on the Phoenix east side.

MORE THAN 16 million persons visit Las Vegas each year, and not all of them lose money at the Nevada gambling tables, reports Trans World Airlines. The state's casinos, which have a total of 1,870 table games, such as blackjack and roulette, and 38,235 slot machines, win only 1½ per cent of the total money wagered. The balance is paid to the players.

TRAVEL LORE

by Clare Wright,
TRAVEL EDITOR

To parody an old expression — "how are you going to keep 'em down in the city now that they've seen the farm."

I couldn't help thinking that the other day when I took my kids to visit Green Meadows Farm, only a short drive up I-94 and just past Waterford, Wis., on U.S. Rte. 20.

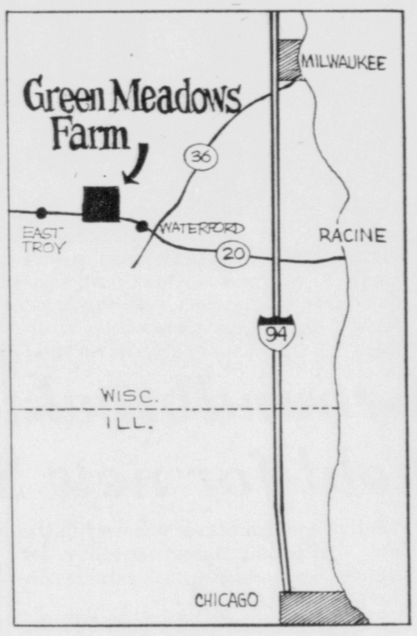
Here's a rare treat for boys and girls born and bred in city ways to learn something about farm life.

AFTER A FULL and wonderful day of watching new-born colts and piglets, riding ponies, sliding and jumping in strawstacks, and swimming in a real honest-to-goodness "ole swimmin' hole" what kid wouldn't say — like mine:

"Gosh, Mom, I wish we could live on a farm!"

Friendly Bob and Connie Keyes, owners of Green Meadows Farm, were among the first to start a P.Y.O.

In plain language that means "pick your own" — and in this day of rising prices this is becoming a mighty popular pastime especially when you can save about 50 per cent on the price of fresh fruits and vegetables.



WHEN WE WERE at Green Meadows the pickling cucumbers were ripe — with green beans and peppers not far behind.

They also have squash, tomatoes and red raspberries.

The Keyes did so well with their P.Y.O. business — and they enjoyed meeting people so much — they decided to go a few steps farther and make Green Meadows a place where families and groups could come for a "true rural experience."

A day's visit to Green Meadows includes a guided tour, which is leisurely enough to allow children to feed and pet the farm animals.

There are more than 300 animals on the farm. The day we were there one of the biggest attractions was a pen full of adorable new pups.

ANOTHER HAPPY highlight is the hayride on a horse-drawn wagon which meanders through the fields and up and down scenic roads until it comes to a spring-fed swimming pond with a sandy beach where the children can enjoy a refreshing swim.

You can spend all day on the farm — swimming, picnicking, wandering through the fields, petting the animals, or just plain relaxing in a quiet rural atmosphere.

It costs $1.50 a person (with children under 2 free).

Green Meadows also offers group rates for schools, church groups or clubs.

Groups can also make arrangements for hayride parties at $1.25 per person — hayrides and campfire parties for $1.50 a person — or a hayride and use of the party barn for $1.75 per person.

The Green Meadows party barns can accommodate 20 to 500 people.

"We can provide home-cooked meals from our farm kitchen — or the groups can bring their own," said Mrs. Keyes.

IN THE WINTER Green Meadows Farm arranges sleighrides, tobogganing and ice skating parties, and they can offer barn cot lodging for groups of 20 to 100 at $4 per person per night, which includes use of all facilities.

It's a busy schedule — all regulated by the Keyes and their 13 children.

For more information about the farm's activities — or a brochure, write to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Keyes, Box 182, Waterford, Wis. 53185.

THEY GUESSED WRONG when they packed their bags for a summer vacation in San Francisco where locals complain of a heat wave if the temperature goes above 75. These travelers should have left the shorts at home!

Zion Park: Grand Canyon in reverse

Zion National Park is almost the Grand Canyon in reverse. You view the magnificence by looking up.

It's a personal park, almost vest-pocket in size, compared wth the Grand Canyon National Park and its Utah neighbor, Bryce National Park.

It houses such wonders as the world's largest monolith, "The Great White Throne," which is hard by towering peaks called the Three Patriarchs. Still, all of its wonders are within a few minutes' riding or walking time from the Zion Lodge and cabins, according to TWA Services, Inc., which now operates all three of the park facilities.

One of the favorite walks is an easy one to Weeping Rock, the sheer wall of a box canyon from which water tumbles or seeps, depending on the season, less than a half mile and a half hour away.

A full range of services is available from bicycles, through nature walks supervised by members of the National Park Service, swimming, amateur theatricals by the staff, and even campfire lectures.

Prices at Zion Lodge range from $7 a day for a single in a standard cabin, to as little as $19 for a family of four in a two-room cabin.

Motor bus tours from Cedar City, Utah range from one to five days covering all three of the parks.

TWA flights into Las Vegas and Phoenix connect with bus and other air services into Cedar City.

Frisco freeze

When it's hot in Chicago, it's not in the Bay City

by MARGE BOOKER

SAN FRANCISCO — It's surprising how many first-time visitors to this widely toasted but rarely toasty metropolis get caught with their Bermudas on.

Pity the poor midwesterner who treks out here with only a silk stole for an evening wrap.

Daytime temperatures beside the Golden Gate average 60-65 degrees in summer, 46-57 in winter.

When Chicago is hot, San Francisco is not. Or hardly ever. If the mercury rises above 75, the locals complain of a heat wave and completely lose their cool.

SAN FRANCISCO'S automatic air-conditioning is created by a unique combination of waters, winds and topography. During much of the summer a great fogbank hugs the cold currents off the Northern California coast. In the Central Valley temperatures soar to 100 or more. Because air always travels from cooler to warmer surfaces, the mist moves toward the mountainous shore. Denied access along a nearly 600 mile front, it thrusts through the continental wall at the mouth of San Francisco Bay. As the land cools, the vapor dissipates.

Ona typical dawn in July, August or September, San Francisco lies blanketed in its cool comforter. The unwary out-of-towner looks out of his hotel window and reaches for a heavy coat, if he happened to bring one. But he will be deceived. For soon the fog begins to break up over the East Bay and fade to translucence around Fisherman's Wharf, Telegraph Hill and the financial district. By noon the city is basking in bright sunlight. So the nonplused newcomer switches to resortwear and is seen shivering from site to site at dusk when the capricious fog comes back.

Since the climate is almost invariably springlike in this city for all seasons, San Franciscans have it made. The same clothes — knits, light wools and worsteds — suffice year-round.

IF THEY want warmer weather, they can find it in their own backyards. There's an apt, if oversimplified, adage that says the temperature goes up 10 degrees every 10 miles you travel from the city. When it's a comfortable 65 in San Francisco, it will be in the 80s across the Golden Gate in Marin County to the north, on the Peninsula to the south and in Contra Costa County to the east. Sacramento, 88 miles away, and the valley farmlands simmer in the 100s.

Weekends, when the skyscrapers are still wreathed in mists, is when residents reach for their cottons and polyesters, shorts and chinos. You'll see them sunning on the decks of waterfront restaurants in Sausalito and Tiburon, 25 minutes from the city by ferryboat; around the picnic sites, the hiking and biking paths of Angel Island and Mount Tamalpais in Marin and in the wine country a few miles farther north. In town they tend to be more proper in their apparel.

As the San Francisco Convention and Visitors Bureau points out in its Hotel-Motel Guide, "Women will be most comfortable in suits, lightweight wool or knit dresses or ensembles, or street dresses worn with a topcoat. Men's attire requires only light-to-medium weight business suits or sports clothes. An all-weather topcoat is recommended for cool evenings."

OTHER WARDROBE tips offered by the Bureau: "Women who worry about their coiffures will find a headscarf the handiest shield against Pacific breezes and summer fogs. . .Since this compact, scenic city is best explored by foot and cable car, bring comfortable footwear. . .You may feel out of step in white shoes. San Franciscans consider them suitable for the suburbs but countrified downtown. . .Ties and jackets are required men's wear at lunch and dinner in many of the city's best known restaurants."

Here are some other pointers about this congenial spot whose climate seems custom-made in Camelot. Fall is the warmest season. The foghorns moan the most in July, August and September. A summer overcast rarely portends rain. The Golden Gate is never dulled by snow.

Retail events in the northwest suburbs

MEN'S HAIRSTYLISTS Paul Grundman (left) and Larry Gruber use the most modern hairstyling techniques at the newly opened Northpoint Barber Shop in Northpoint Shopping Center, Arlington Heights. Grundman and Gruber, proprietors of the shop, specialize in the latest hair fashions for men and long hair styling.

New barber shop

A new hairstyling shop for men, called Northpoint Barber Shop, recently opened in the lower level Arcade of Northpoint Shopping Center in Arlington Heights.

The proprietors of the shop, Paul Grundman and Larry Gruber, trained and worked for several years in Europe and Canada before coming to the United States.

Grundman and Gruber specialize in the latest hair fashions for men and long hair styling. They also give standard and children's cuts.

The owners belong to several associations for hair stylists. Among the associations are Roffler Styling Group, which emphasizes new techniques in hair styling, and the International Guests Artists Association with emphasis on new hair fashions.

Northpoint Barber Shop is open from 9 a.m. to 6:30 p.m., Tuesday through Friday and from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday.

Fur coat volume is on the upswing

For the first time in years, the fur industry is optimistic about business. After several years of eroding figures, 1971 reversed the trend with a gain of five percent in sales. In 1972, the industry showed a ten percent increase, with some large department stores claiming 20 percent increases for the same period.

Further encouragement was engendered this past spring when fur departments actually sold furs rather then fur storage services. The fur jacket, a perfect companion for pants, and the fur stole, a rediscovered foil for long skirts and dresses, were the major contributors to a 43 percent increase in volume for the first three months of 1973.

With '73 beginning in this manner, the fur industry, which reported a $350 million volume in '72, feels it is slated for unusually healthy gains this year.

What has caused this resurgence of consumer interest in furs? A new approach to styling and more resonable price tags.

Some fur jackets retail as low as $60 and knee-length coats in the $100 range, certainly placing them in direct competition with cloth coats and fake furs. Fur is being used like any other fabrication to interpret the most popular contemporary silhouettes with major emphasis on sportcoats.

Elect Sullivan to CATA post

William Sullivan, president of Sullivan Pontiac at 666 East Northwest Highway in Arlington Heights, has been elected Treasurer of the Chicago Automobile Trade Association. The CATA, sponsors of the annual Chicago Auto Show, is made up of more than 600 franchised new car dealers in the greater Chicago area.

William Sullivan

A veteran automobile man, Sullivan has been in the business for more than 25 years. He became sales manager of the Pontiac dealership, then located at 1101 Diversey Parkway and was elected President in 1966. Earlier this year he relocated his dealership to new and more spacious facilities in Arlington Heights.

One of the busiest of automotive men, Sullivan has served as chairman of the Crusade of Mercy new car dealers' fund drive in Chicago for the past four years. He has also served as vice president of the Chicagoland Pontiac Dealers Association and a member of the National Pontiac Dealers Council.

He was recently appointed to serve on the Executive Show Committee which is planning and will direct the operation of the 1974 Chicago Auto Show to be held February 23 through March 3 in McCormick Place.

Turn-Style stores plan catalogs

Turn-Style Plus catalog showrooms will develop and print their own catalog for distribution in the fall of 1974 according to a recent announcement by D. L. Lewis, president of the Chicago based chain of Turn-Style self-service department stores.

The four color, 368 page catalog will be produced by the Turn-Style advertising department under the direction of Glen Henricks, vice president of advertising and sales promotion and Alma Bellak, advertising manager.

Named to new responsibilities in connection with the catalog project are: John Sivak, production manager, catalog and retail advertising; Cheryl Baratta, advertising catalog coordinator; and Lynne Robbins, catalog and retail advertising layout designer.

New assignments in Turn-Style retail advertising include: Liz Geurink, retail advertising coordinator for both ahrd and soft lines, and Barbara Feller, production assistant, retail advertising.

The first Turn-Style Plus catalog showrooms will open this fall in three Chicago area Turn-Style stores at Woodfield Commons in Schaumburg, Deerbrook Shopping Center in Deerfield, and Four Flaggs Shopping Center at Golf and Milwaukee in Niles. These stores will use catalogs this year that have been purchased from Giant Foods of Washington, D.C.

Groundbreaking ceremony held for new Sears store

The ceremony officially launched the construction of the new store in the Dundee Plaza. Participants in the 11 a.m. groundbreaking were William Evans, Sears group catalog order manager; Jerry Cohen, manager of the present Sears catalog surplus store in Wheeling; Fred Linski of Dundee Plaza, Inc.; Arthur Mascarello, the contractor; and Wheeling village president, Ted Scanlon.

Also present at the groundbreaking were Ralph DeMeo, chief superintendent for A. A. Mascarello Construction Co.; Kevin Garvey, an attorney for Sears; Harry Linski of Dundee Plaza, Inc.; Peter Ellison, surplus coordinator for Sears; John Austin of Sears midwest region public relations; and Steve Tenvoorde, assistant manager for Sears catalog surplus store in Wheeling.

Cohen said that Sears new Catalog Surplus Store serving the Wheeling area will have a gross area of 32,625 feet. It will be three times the size of the present unit located 1,000 feet to the east of the new site.

It will feature Sears nationally advertised soft-lines merchandise as well as a greatly expanded selection of major appliances. Most of the merchandise will represent new but discontinued or surplus goods at discounted prices. Electrical and mechanical units will carry a guarantee to be free of operational defects.

A catalog order desk, where any of the more than 200,000 itmes in the Sears catalogs may be ordered, will be featured in the store.

The store is being built under Sears plans and specifications by Dundee Plaza Inc., with the A. A. Mascarello Co. serving as contractor.

Moose Point Lodge has fishing, hunting supreme

For fishing and hunting supreme, Moose Point Lodge in Canada is good spot to try.

Located approximately 130 air miles northeast of Thunder Bay in Ontario, the Lodge is situated in beautiful virgin forest with clean air and water so clear it can be drunk directly from the lake.

Facilities at the Lodge include the main building plus several cabins. In the main lodge are two rooms with four twin beds and two rooms with two twin beds. All have adjoining baths.

Three duplex cabins each sleep eight. About a mile from the main lodge are two housekeeping cabins, one sleeping ten and the other eight.

Cost of the accommodations in the main lodge are $45 a day per person, including food and lodging, boat, motor and guide. Not included is bait or refreshments. Cost for accommodations in the housekeeping cabins is $20 per day per person including boat and motor. If a guide is provided, it is an additional $20 per day.

The formal dining room on the first floor of the main lodge seats about 40 people. The entire facility is completely self-contained by electrical generating equipment.

Moose, walleye, northern and small mouth bass are the prime targets for guests at Moose Point Lodge. Fishing season runs from May 15 to Oct. 15.

Ted Kocim, who stayed at the Lodge recently, said, "When my son and I made our first cast, we had a walleye and a northern on our lines. During the three days we were there, we lost count after catching 200 walleye and 30 northern."

He recommended using yellow, black, red and white jigs and any colored floating or sinking rapalas. "In this area, the larger the bait the larger the fish," Kocim said.

Thunder Bay can be reached in about 12-13 hours driving time from the northwest suburbs. Transportation from there to the Lodge is either by airplane or train.

The Lodge is managed by Clarence and Annette Stein who have two small daughters. Stein, born in Canada, has worked for the Department of Land and Forest and is a licensed guide with 14 years experience. He is also a licensed outboard mechanic.

The contact in the Chicago area is Donald D. Schubert, 23415 Western Ave., Park Forest, phone 748-0954.

"Living in sheer wilderness, seeing several moose, and watching my first bald eagle nesting in a tree a short distance from camp made the whole trip worthwhile," Kocim said.

Population trends

The Census Bureau reported that the population growth rate has plummeted to its lowest level since the depression years of the 1930's. Demographers still say the prospect of zero growth rate is unlikely to be achieved in this generation — or perhaps ever.

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, the U.S. population ended 1972 at 209,717,000, a gain of only 1,628,000 in the year and the lowest numerical increase since 1945. This represents a growth rate of 7.8 persons per 1,000 of population, the lowest since 1937's, 6.7 per 1,000.

Banquet business booms for Camelot Restaurant

In the past four years The Camelot Restaurant, 1730 S. Elmhurst Rd., Des Plaines, has built a reputation for itself as having one of the finest banquet and reception facilities in the area.

Mr. Andrews, owner of The Camelot, cites two main reasons for the excellent reputation The Camelot now enjoys. "The food we use is only of the finest quality, it is never prepared ahead of time and always come to the tables hot," he said. "Secondly, the services provided by employes are always efficient and polite."

There are three main banquet rooms for large parties, meetings and receptions. They are the Regal Room, holding 500, the Guinevere Room and the King Arthur Room, both with a seating capacity of 250.

The spacious banquet rooms, like the rest of the restaurant, are fashioned in the "Old English" style. Deep red draperies, plush patterned carpeting and rustic chandeliers complement the dark wood furniture.

According to Mr. Andrews, approximately 75 percent of all the wedding receptions held at The Camelot are given by Arlington Heights residents. He said it is not unusual for the restaurant to host seven or eight wedding receptions on a weekend. The number has gone as high as ten in the past.

During the week, The Camelot does a sizable luncheon and dinner business. There are four rooms to accommodate diners with a total seating capacity of 490. They are the dining room, the lounge, the executive room, and the buffet room.

At lunch time in the buffet room, guests can feast on an assortment of luncheon meats, roast beef, salads and special luncheon features. They can have as much as they want of everything — for a trim $1.95.

In the remaining rooms a moderately priced menu fills the bill with appetizers, steak and seafood dinners, refreshing cold plates, salads, and hot and cold sandwiches. An added attraction during the luncheon hours is a fashion show for Camelot patrons.

Starting in September the evening dinner menu at The Camelot is adding gourmet items to its list. In addition to a fine selection of steaks and seafoods, diners can treat their tastebuds to some epicurean delights.

Athenian lamb chops, Duckling Flambe a l'Orange, Steak Diane, Rack of Lamb, Flaming Lobster and Beef Cotillion, Chateaubriand, Filet of Beef Straganoff, Beef Tenderloin Pepper Steak and Flaming Camelots will whet the appetite of any connoisseur of fine food. Ceasar salads and Athenian salads are also on the bill of fare.

Tuesday through Saturday night Bruce Cherry entertains at the piano bar in the lounge.

D. Hill Nursery invites public to Bonsai show

D. Hill Nursery on the corner of Routes 31 and 72 in Dundee, boasts a rare Oriental entrance "arch." This Torii (pronounced "tow-ree") is constructed of heavy timbers and painted the traditional oriental red, serving the same welcoming function as it does in Japan where it is primarily associated with places of sacred or historical interest.

The Torii is a permanent attraction on the Hill's Nursery grounds, but when you see it on the weekend of August 17-18-19, you'll know you've arrived at the largest annual Bonsai gathering between the east and west coasts.

Every year on the third weekend in August, the nursery becomes the "mecca" of American Bonsai growers. The show has been functioning since the late 1950's but the nursery's interest in the ancient Oriental art of growing dwarfed plants in a handful of soil actually dates from 1902. That was the year Arthur Hill returned to Dundee from Japan with Bonsai plant material and Japanese nurserymen to instruct his staff.

The Bonsai show, an event to which the public is invited, features exhibits from novice and experienced growers from all over the country. The finest works of the Oriental art available will be on display for all to see in the nursery's "shady garden gallery."

Included as a separate feature for the first time will be Hill's Bonsai Exhibit — dozens of aged, shapely specimens of varying species. "Holding court" over this cherished collection will be the venerable "Hill's Patriarch" a 73 or more year old Japanese Juniper which was part of the original propagating stock imported by Arthur Hill at the turn of the century.

The Friday-Saturday-Sunday show is free to the public, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. each day. Browsers can avail themselves of lectures and demonstrations by Kaneji Domoto, Bonsai authority: or they can wander through the permanent display of Japanese gardens; or they can stop in at the old Hill's homestead and view the new, prize winning movie, "Bonsai, The Art of Training Dwarf Potted Trees," or visit the Rama House where the supplies for creating your own Bonsai are on sale.

So come to the show, pass through the welcoming Torii, and renew your acquaintance with the pleasures of Bonsai.

World of crafts offers free craft instructions

When you enter the shop at 8337 W. Lawrence in Chicago, you enter the World of Crafts, which carries a complete supply of name brand arts and craft supplies, ideas and instruction books.

Proprietors of the shop, Gloria and Stan Kuciel have an array of handmade samples of craft projects displayed around the shop to give the craft novice a better idea of the particular crafts.

Included in the long list of craft supplies are candle making, bottle cutting, mod podge, art prints, rugmaking supplies, macrame, craft for flowers, tableaux painting, 17th century quilling and California sand painting. The list is loaded with other crafts, both the usual and the unusual.

With the moderately priced supplies come free instructions and demonstrations in the Work Shoppe and Class Room. Although the Kuciels lose on instructors' time, which they pay for, the owners hope that students will be so pleased with their endeavors that they will repeat the effort again and again.

The World of Crafts gives special consideration to scout troops, schools, institutions, church groups and organizations. There are qualified personnel available at all times for ideas and instructions.

The World of Crafts is open Monday through Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m.; to 5 p.m. on Saturday and noon to 4 p.m. on Sunday.

RON KUHN (center), service manager at Ladendorf Olds, 77 Rand Rd., Des Plaines receives Oldsmobile's "Key Man" award for 1972 from Walt Smith, service representative for Oldsmobile Division G.M.C. Looking on is Don Ladendorf, company president. The award is one of six made annually for quality of service to customers, facilities, fewest customer complaints and general management efficiency.

Fishing his favorite sport

Curt Gowdy, TV's top sportscaster

by VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD — Curt Gowdy has emerged as television's top sportscaster appearing on both NBC and ABC and when he can steal a few days from his busy schedule he devotes his time to his own favorite sport, fishing.

A personable man with a relaxed outlook on life, Gowdy and his wife, Jerre, have been married 24 years. He is probably the only weekly television personality who makes his home in Wellesley Hills, Mass., a handy 25 minutes from the Boston airport.

Because he spends almost as much time in jets as he does at home, flying to cities across the United States, a nearby airport is a necessity.

GOWDY, A former six-letter man at the University of Wyoming, lives in a large English Tudor home of red brick set on five acres which includes a swimming pool. He first went to Boston to broadcast the Red Sox games in 1951 and liked the area so well he decided to stay.

They both love New England, so they purchased a 500-acre farm near Franconia, N. H., more than a year ago. The ancient house is built of native fieldstone and looks like an old English hunting lodge. There are seven bedrooms to accommodate the Gowdy offspring and their friends.

They are the parents of Cheryl, 22; Curt Jr., 20, and Trevor, 16.

It's a 2½ hour drive from Boston to their country home, a trip Jerre and Curt make as often as possible during the summer. When the snow begins to pile up, the Gowdys enjoy skiing on nearby mountains. They own three snowmobiles for family fun in the winter.

IN SUMMER Curt enjoys fishing in nearby lakes and streams. But if he gets the itch to fish in winter he and Jerre fly down to their condominium home in Key Biscayne, Fla.

Curt works almost every weekend of his life broadcasting baseball, basketball, football and special sporting events, so he must schedule trips to New England or Florida during the week.

The Gowdy home in Massachusets is furnished in gracious antiques and Tiffany lamps. The New Hampshire house is more rustic and has a breathtaking view of the mountains.

One room in the Gowdy home is a radio studio. Curt broadcasts his network show from the house, saving him the drive to Boston. He also owns three radio stations in Laurence, Mass., Laramie, Wyo., and Portsmouth, N. H. He is also international field tester for the Berkley Co., which is a labor of love. The firm manufactures Curt Gowdy fishing rods.

GOWDY IS an authority on ecology and a national director of Trout Unlimited. His biggest thrill did not come in sports at all, but when a state park in Cheyenne, Wyo., was named in his honor in March, 1972.

When he's not broadcasting or fishing — which is seldom — Curt enjoys a game of tennis. But patching up the New Hampshire farmhouse has been a major preoccupation in the past year.

Things are a bit easier for the couple in Wellesley Hills where there is always help in the house. Jerre needs as much as she can get with 17 rooms to look after and a garden which Curt enjoys planting in the spring.

The future looms bright for the Gowdys who are thinking about installing a ski resort in New Hampshire — and a fishing camp for the summer.

Familiar roles

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jason Robards and George Grizzard are no strangers to their roles in the late Clifford Odets' drama, "The Country Girl," which will be seen as an NBC Hallmark Hall of Fame drama special during the coming season. They starred in the 1972 stage revival as, respectively, an alcoholic actor and the director who tries to give him a comeback chance.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A A X R is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Slackening rolls to curb Harper budget

by KATHERINE BOYCE

Harper College will operate on one of the tightest budgets in its history next year due to slackening student enrollments.

Expenditures in the college's two major operating funds, education and building, are estimated at a total of $8.1 million, a decrease of about 2 per cent from last year's budget of $8.3 million.

Harper's student enrollment usually averages an increase of about 20 per cent each year, but last year the increase amounted to only 7.5 per cent and an increase of 8 per cent is expected this year. Total college enrollment is estimated at 13,500 this fall.

WHEN IT BECAME apparent to college officials last spring that enrollments would not meet projections, the board of trustees ordered a freeze on expenditures and promised to make adjustments in next year's budget.

Expenditures for supplies, travel and equipment were tightened and additional teachers were not hired except for new programs.

Harper College Vice President William Mann said the college has adhered to the provisions of the freeze and will continue to hold the line on expenditures next year.

Harper officials warned last spring that a referendum to increase taxes may be necessary to balance the college budget in the future. Mann said last week that due to a tightening in expenditures, "we think the budget will be all right for two or three years."

ABOUT 38 PER CENT of the revenue in next year's budget will be provided through local taxes, about 32 per cent from state funds and 28 per cent from student tuition. Student tuition for next year has been raised from $12 to $14 per semester hour of credit. The tax rate remains the same, 19 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

Student enrollment could have been higher if Harper had more buildings for vocational facilities, said Mann. Last year about 1,400 students were turned away from vocational programs because the college did not have the funds to expand its facilities.

All junior colleges in the state are placed on a priority list for state funds for building construction, but in Harper's case, approval of funds has not come fast enought to keep up with growing enrollments.

ALTHOUGH STUDENT enrollment will increase by about 8 per cent next year, student-teacher ratios will remain about the same as last year, 26 students per teacher, said Mann. The college uses lecture classes where class sizes are large to trim instructional costs. Five additional teachers have been hired for new college programs next year, and the budget reflects an increase of about 5.5 per cent in salaries.

Income per student from local taxes has decreased by 60 per cent during the past six years, but has been offset by a 96 per cent increase in income from student tuition, and a 57 per cent increase in state aid. Chargebacks, revenue received from neighboring colleges and high schools, when local schools do not have programs for students, is expected to drop by 13 per cent next year as neighboring colleges increase their class offerings.

The Doctor Says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — You often recommend exercise and proper diet. It is not difficult to find samples of adequate diets and proper foods to eat for good health, but what about quality and quantity of good exercise?

Do you advocate exercise routines such as the publicized Royal Canadian Air Force exercise plan of 11 minutes a day, or do you consider this amount of time to be insufficient? What distances of walking would you recommend for optimum benefits at what ages.?

Dear Reader — The RCAF exercise plan (Five BX Plan for Men or Ten BX Plan for Women) has many attractive features. Almost anyone can crowd its short duration of exercise into a busy schedule. The gradual increase in the level of activity is important. Any exercise program should begin at a low level and be gradually increased to the desired level to maintain one's physical fitness. Crash programs and overdoing it are the usual causes of trouble during exercise programs.

Some doctors habe criticized the back arching and bending and twisting exercises in the RCAF plan. Individuals who have any spine problems should have a careful examination before engaging in these types of exercises.

I am not enthusiastic about the RCAF plan's gradual increase in the speed of exercising. I prefer to have people exercise at a low or moderate level well below their maximum capacity, and then sustain this level of exercise for longer periods of time as their fitness is developed. It's better to walk three miles, if you can, than run in place at a rapid rate for one to five minutes.

For the general public at all ages, I recommend simple walking. Almost everyone in reasonably good health can walk 10 or 15 minutes at a comfortable rate. The walking period can be increased gradually. Most people should try to maintain a level of one-and-a-half miles a day for a minimal level — done daily without fail.

BEFORE PROGRESSING to other exercises, one should gradually develop the ability to walk three miles in one hour. It may require several weeks to acquire this level of fitness. Individuals who can't achieve this level without difficulty should not engage in anything more strenuous without a medical evaluation. Individuals who tolerate this amount of exercise well can, if they wish, begin a jogging or running program in the middle of such an exercise effort.

About half way through a 30-minute walk, they may jog 100 steps counting when the left foot hits the ground. The number of steps can then be increased at a slow rate, say 10 steps a day until gradually the running or jogging program may reach as high as 15 minutes, or in young, healthy people may be extended. In this way, the amount of exeriise can be increased gradually and safely.

Don't try to jog or run too fast. Jog within a rate of 50 to 100 steps a minute, counting as one step each time the left foot hits the ground or surface. Most of the people who get into trouble try to set speed records or compete against themselves or someone else. The increased speed can push the work of the heart beyond the safe level.

Underground sheet rates drugs for kids

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — Street kids shelling out $25 for 100 gelatin squares sold as "LSD Windowpane" are not getting an active drug at all. "THC Goldenrod," a pale orange tablet selling for $50 per 100, is really PCP, a tranquilizer used primarily for monkeys.

That's the word from "The Friday Paper Drug News," a weekly news sheet obtainable in the San Francisco Bay Area every Friday afternoon.

Prepared by Joann Lee, a mile-a-minute talker and drug coordinator for the Berkeley Free Clinic, the paper keeps "users" abreast of what is really in the "stuff" they are buying.

"PEOPLE ARE going to use mind-altering drugs," she says matter-of-factly. "I feel a certain responsibility to help them to know what they're getting and to know the risks they're taking."

The paper's system works like this:

A user comes to the clinic, located in the basement of a church near the University of California campus, picks up an information sheet marked with a five-digit number, and leaves.

In privacy, he encloses a sample of the drug he questions and sends it to Pharm Chem Laboratory in Palo Alto.

The laboratory analyzes the sample and sends its findings to the Free Clinic where they are printed in the Friday paper.

Is that legal?

"ALL WE HANDLE is information," said Ms. Lee. The laboratory is licensed to analyze mind altering drugs and the user takes no greater risk than before,' she said. He doesn't sign his name and the Friday paper prints his sheet number to help identify his specimen.

"In terms of providing accurate information for people . . . it is brilliant. We print 1,000 a week."

She estimated that there are "something like 200" programs in the United States of this sort. "The University of Oregon at Eugene has an off-campus program and so does the University of Florida at Gainesville."

The Los Angeles Free Press runs a weekly "Dope Scoreboard" which discusses at length various drugs being "eaten, snorted and smoked."

MISS LEE said her Friday paper has been well received. "People who are doing psychedelics don't want to run the risk of dying. If they know what they're dealing with, they can take the proper precautions," she said.

For instance a recent edition advised, "PCP is a B-A-A-A-A-D drug to mess with — mixes with alcohol to produce comas, maybe death . . . nasty trip, etc."

And, "Smack freaks — watch out for the light brown powder selling for $50 a gram in San Francisco. This is second week in a row with superpotent smack. This 79 per cent stuff is about 26 times stronger than usual."

In Santa Cruz, the paper noted a dark brown soft fibrous solid sold as "Kashmir hash" for $1,100 a pound is really 2.4 per cent THC.

"Hash usually runs about 15-20 per cent THC," said the news. "This is a burn."

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

IMP matches are definitely the best test of bridge skill, but even here there is a tremendous element of luck.

Now take a good look at the South hand. You respond one diamond to your partner's club opening. He rebids clubs, you raise him to three and he bids three spades.

It is clear that his spade call is some sort of cue bid. Is he suggesting a slam; asking you to bid three no-trump if you can stop spades or maybe telling you that he can stop spades and wants you to try no-trump if you can stop hearts.

At Table 1 in an important team match South decided to bid three no-trump with his near stoppers in both major suits. North thought it showed a sure heart stopper and passed.

South was most unhappy with the king of hearts lead. He didn't have to be. East held just one high heart and no matter when he took it the suit blocked and only four heart tricks were available to the defense.

At Table 2 South decided against three no-trump and took his partner to five clubs. East opened the 10 of spades and declarer had to lose three tricks.

Schools offer 350 courses for adults

High School Dist. 214 will provide more than 350 adult education classes to the community this fall through the district continuing education program.

While most courses are planned for special interests, hobbies or sports, it is possible for an adult to take both high school and college credit courses leading to either the high school diploma or college degree.

The continuing education class brochure will be mailed to district residents Aug. 29 and will contain course descriptions of all classes including some 20 new classes. Among the new offerings is a special course called football appreciation, designed to help get more enjoyment out of watching games on television.

An income tax seminar and classes in parapsychology, matrimonial law, spinning, weaving, oil painting, acrylic painting, and a jewelry-making workshop will be offered for the first time. Other new classes include women's potential and instrument pilot aviation.

Classes will be held in all eight Dist. 214 high schools as well as in other community facilities. Most classes will begin the week of Sept. 24.

Registration can be by mail or in person at the continuing education office, 799 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect. All registration will begin Aug. 30 and the office will be open weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Aug. 30 to Sept. 4, weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. Sept. 10 to 21, and on Saturdays from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. on Sept. 8, 15 and 22.

Further information can be obtained by calling the continuing education office at 253-1700.

Kunkel takes Mid-Teen title with 13-6 win

Representing the National division, Kunkel has defeated Allens in a best-of-three games tournament for the Des Plaines Mid-Teen championship. Kunkel clinched the title on Sunday with a 13-6 win.

The series ran three games and part of a fourth which had to be restarted when halted by darkness.

Kunkel took a 6-5, eight-inning decision from Allens of the American division to open tourney play. In the second game, the clubs battled to a scoreless deadlock after six innings last Tuesday when the game was halted.

They resumed play on Wednesday, Allns winning, 4-3, in 10 innings.

On Thursday, in what would have been the deciding game, Kunkel led Allens, 11-10, when play was stopped after four innings.

Since it hadn't gone into the fifth inning, that game was tossed out completely and rescheduled for Sunday when Kunkel clinched the title.

Allens represented the American division without having to win a divisional playoff. It won both halves of the summer season by compiling 7-1 and 7-2 records.

Kunkel won the National division first half but placed fourth behind winner Sellergren in the second half. Kunkel beat Sellergren, 3-0, in a playoff.

Tourney lineup

The starting alignment for the Paddock Publications golf tournament at Thunderbird will be published in the Thursday and Friday sports section. Golfers who have qualified for the tourney should check the Herald on those days for starting tee-off times and foursomes.

TOLL TAKER HOLE. Midlane Country Club's fifth hole has a pond to put up with as well as a double dogleg and out-of-bounds. Summer dwindling when...

A FEW MUSINGS while the depressing realization sinks in that all of one's alloted vacation time has been used up for another year . . .

You know that summer is dwindling when — — The Cubs and White Sox are down for the count and it's time to trot out the annual "Wait till next year!" cry.

— Pennant races begin to get serious in the major leagues and more and more series are labeled crucial.

— Few or no boys baseball reports trickle in to this office, in contrast to the mountains of forms we receive in June and July.

— Scorebooks for high school and Legion ball are stored away to collect dust until next April.

— The weather becomes nice just in time for the end of local youth baseball seasons.

— We no longer have to fight traffic around Arlington Park race track from about 1-1:30 and 5:45-6:30 every day.

— It gradually becomes noticeable to twilight golfers that they have to hurry more to get their game in before dark.

— Football coaches send out dates of equipment issuing and welcomes to prospective players.

— Informal calisthenic sessions of high school football players gradually get more strenuous.

— Fans begin wondering out loud which area schools will be best in football, who has who back, and how tough their favorite team's schedule will be.

— Plans begin in this office for previewing the football season for all area schools — and coverage for the whole school year.

— Wives and girl friends glance at the television set on a Saturday night and groan in disbelief, "You mean football is starting again? It just ended!" (It did!)

— We hear more and more talk about why the Bears should or should not (mostly not) use Bobby Douglass — Chicago's most controversial athlete — at quarterback.

— Magazines previewing the college and pro football seasons, seemingly endless and increasing in number every year, pop up more and more on newsstands.

— Arthur Wirtz makes his annual announcement that prices of tickets, parking, beer, food and programs at Black Hawk games are going up. (Maybe this year, instead, the announcement will be that the World Hockey Association has signed the entire Hawk team, including Janet Lynn, to make up a new franchise).

— The Bulls, like the Hawks, prepare to open training camp. (For winter sports, yet.)

— We wonder if there's a chance of getting away for one last weekend camping or fishing trip.

— Golfers realize with a twinge of regret that they don't have all that much good, warm weather left to enjoy their passion, and that the season is already about four months old. (Wasn't it only yesterday that we pulled those clubs out of storage?)

— Plans are finalized for another Paddock Publications Inter-League Handicap Golf Tournament, and a lot of guys pray for decent weather on the big day (this Sunday at Thunderbird Country Club).

— Bowlers start to sharpen up for leagues that will open in about a month — and vow to add at least 10 pins to their averages this winter.

— Fanatic skiers get more and more itchy, dream of fluffy white powder snow and perhaps of a winter vacation in Aspen.

— Kids begin counting the remaining days until school reopens, with increasing gloom.

— Mothers begin counting the remaining days until school reopens, with increasing glee.

San Diego depends on a 'legend'

Johnny Unitas: just one more time

by MURRAY OLDERMAN

IRVINE, Calif. — The one concession made by the San Diego Chargers to the age of John Unitas is that he doesn't have to participate in grass drills.

The grass drill is a grueling training exercise made infamous at Green Bay by the late Vince Lombardi. It is a staple part of the Chargers' training program, a series of staccato calisthenics.

But John Unitas is 40 years old and at that age in football one depends largely on guile.

He isn't going to be paid around a quarter of a million dollars this year for his ability as a contortionist. Besides, his right knee is arthritic and hurts.

His arm also isn't what it used to be and he probably sets up a shade slower in retreating from behind the center.

But his mind is sharp and his reputation legendary, and the San Diego Chargers are prepared to risk their fortunes for 1973 on his ability to lead and to recognize defenses and to throw well enough to score touchdowns.

Harland Svare, whose job it is to overcome the specter of Oakland and Kansas City perennially dominating the western sector of the American Football Conference, says, "I think it's just a matter of him getting hurt that's the risk."

Svare has had experience operating with aging quarterbacks, having both played and coached on the same side of such antiquarians as Charlie Conerly, Y.A. Tittle and Sonny Jurgensen. He's not treating Unitas like a special basket case. "He has to run," says Svare, "like everybody else."

And the truth is that during his career Unitas never has expected deferential treatment. Why, at this stage of his life, apparently well fixed with multiple real estate and restaurant interests in Baltimore and Orlando, Fla., and an advertising agency in New York, does he submit to the physical rack of football?

"Because I like it," he says simply. (The cash inflow, I am told, doesn't hurt either.)

"I'm not trying to prove anything. To sportswriters, to football or to myself. What have I got to prove?"

Well, there was the debacle of last season when a legendary quarterback who had never played for any pro team but the Baltimore Colts was brusquely benched after five games and seldom used again. And then he was peddled off like common merchandise by Joe Thomas, the controversial general manager of the Colts.

Unitas shrugs. "What do you do about a guy who won't look you straight in the eye? If they had a team in Nome, Alaska, he would have traded me there."

The Chargers let him room by himself in a small two-room suite at their sleek dormitory-campus training setup at the University of California in Irvine. With his hair grown-out after 20 years of a butch crew-cut and his still flat belly, he fits into the player milieu. A deep wrinkle under his Slavic eyes is the only age tipoff.

"I don't know why they want me here," he says. There is still in Unitas a mocking self-effacement, but he claims he's serious.

"They got a kid," he continues, "who's a good quarterback. He's been here four years. A team's got to make a move. How the hell they ever going to know how good he is?"

But Wayne Clark, who's tall and throws impressively, has only eight passes in his pro career ledger (Unitas has more than 5,000) and came out of a little local college called U.S. International. Owner Gene Klein personally intervened to get Unitas from the Colts. The Chargers have to make a bid to win right now before their defensive line, like Unitas, wears out from old age. They started training camp with nine former all-pros on their roster.

The question about Unitas, of course, is the strength of his throwing arm. Because in the early practice sessions, he has been tossing mostly soft, short lobs, there was a suspicion he was reluctant to test his arm — or didn't have one to test. Not so, bridles Unitas: "My arm last season was the best it's been in four years."

The toughest part for him in joining San Diego has been a change in offensive philosophy. For all his 17 seasons in Baltimore, the Colts played wide open offense, letting Unitas strike for the long ones and his practice throwing was geared to that philosophy.

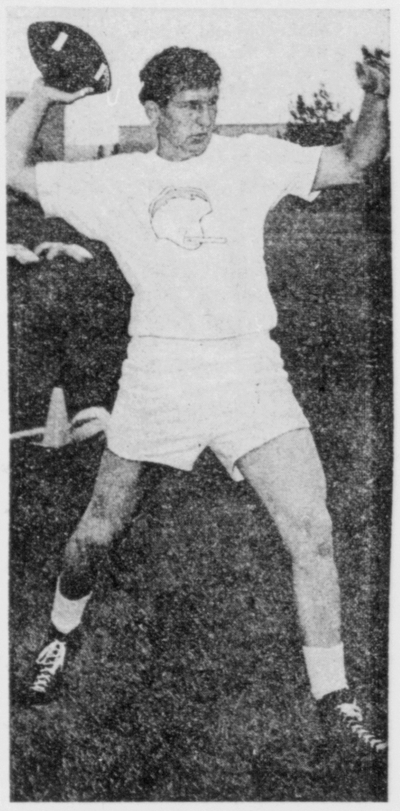
"Here," he smiles wryly, "we play the Green Bay offense. Throw to the backs."

Surely, the Chargers have long fly patterns for their wide receivers, which will give Unitas a chance to open up. "They got to be in the book," he shrugs, "before you can use them."

But there's an underlying confidence he'll be able to persuade the coaches, primarily Bob Schnelker, the offensive coordinator, to use his bold approach to play calling.

Schnelker clashed on this issue with John Hadl last year, and that's why Hadl was traded. Unitas carries special clout as a living legend.

(Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)



GETTING READY for the 1973 season at his own pace, John Unitas prepares to take over as the San Diego Chargers' "new" quarterback.

Nixon fires three birds, to lead YMCA golf league

Keeffer Roofing and Allen's Men's Store are the only teams with 20 or more points after the latest action in the YMCA Twilight Golf League.

Keeffer holds the lead with 24½, but Allen's is a solid second with 20. Capt. Milt Koehler, Norm Campbell, Dale Janssen, Dan Kaczmarek, and Rog Nyberg.

In the birdie corner for the week were red-hot Ed Nixon on 11-12-17, Bruce Campbell and Kaczmarek on 18, and Dick Hoyt on 11.

Nixon won low gross honors with a 35, Campbell had a 39, and Kaczmarek a 41. Nixon, Henry Schaller, and Mike Schwartz had low net 32s.

The top individual records in the league this season belong to Fred Heisler with eight wins, no losses, and three ties; Al Wood 8-1-2; and Dick Hoyt 8-3-0.

Team standings, Aug. 8:

Keeffer Roofing	24½
Allen's Men's Store	20
Kunkel Realtors	17½
Bank & Trust of Arl.	17½
Hal Lieber Trophies	15
Hilliker Associates	13½
Arlington Toyota	13
B & H Blueprints	12½
Mt. Prospect State Bank	9
Kre-Ken Patterns	7½

Arlington twilight golf results

Spencer Cichon had the low net score with 30 strokes while Len Haines Jr. and Steve Gecan had the low gross scores of 39 strokes apiece in last Friday's Arlington Heights Twilight golf league play at Thunderbird Country Club.

Birdies were shot by Bob Hudec, Howard Kagay, Gerry Thompson, Bud Bentson (2), Len Dunteman, Len Haines Sr., Paul Kalamar, Don McGowan, Mickey McGuire, Charles Kleinofen, Fred Grant, Chuck Staadt (2) and Bob Scott.

Leaders by individual flights, one-to-five, were Marty Gilmore 114, Kleinofen 121, Gordon Ward 94, Bud Horcher 109 and Kalamar 107½.

New team standings are City Welding 485½, Crest Heating and Air Conditioning 484, Service Stampings 469, Baird and Warner 469, Bank of Arlington 468½, Binzel Industries 461½, Nowack Sales 451½, Arlington Structural 450, Koops Mustard 444½, Control Equipment 441½, Behrens Insurance 426 and Lauterburg and Oehler 410½.

TEACH YOURSELF TENNIS

22. The Singles Game

Tennis is a fascinating game because there is an endless variety of plays. Each player will eventually find the game he is best suited for, although he will occasionally shift to another style simply for the fun of trying a new technique.

Only at the beginning stage is the player limited in variety. The novice must acquire sound strokes before he learns variations, and he must also achieve steadiness before learning accuracy, spin and pace.

The beginner's only object is to get the ball into the court. His groundstrokes should clear the net by 10 or 15 feet, his first serve should go into court regularly and he should make as few errors as possible.

Beyond getting his first serve in, the intermediate player should learn placement and depth. All his serves should be hit to the receiver's backhand. He must get the ball past the service line and can count himself successful if most of his shots land within two feet of the baseline. And he should have an elementary plan of attack.

CONSIDER A RETAIL MANAGEMENT TRAINING PROGRAM

After four years of college, you didn't want to settle for any job — typing, filing and answering phones just wasn't your thing — but, without experience, many real career opportunities seemed closed to you. Now, you can make all your hard work and years of study pay off . . . through a retail management training program at The Limited.

The Limited is a rapidly growing retail chain specializing in clothes for exciting young women . . . with Chicagoland stores . . . and we're getting bigger and more modern every day!

There are many fascinating and responsible career opportunities available as a Management Trainee, plus while you're learning the retail business, you'll receive great benefits and an outstanding opportunity to increase your earnings.

If you're convinced you want a career — if you're really sure — and you have the determination and ability to make the most of an opportunity — consider The Limited for an exciting future in retail management.

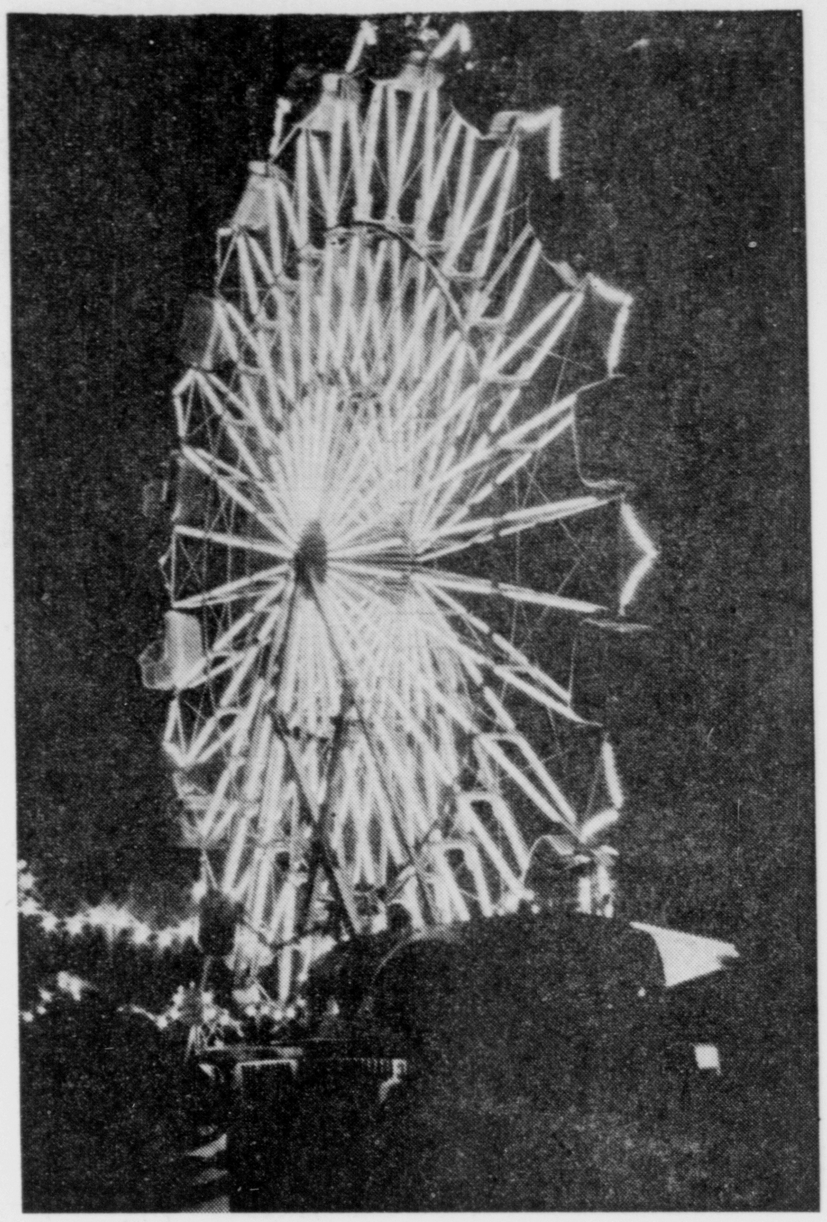
THE CARNIVAL



Freaks are fewer, rides can be chancy, prices are higher... but it's still an American institution and the marks keep coming.

Story by Tom Tiede

AFTON, N.Y — Early this century, on a whim, a haberdashery clerk named Richard Coleman scraped together $250 and bought a merry-go-round. It was a second-hand piece of junk — the organ was dead, the motor was gone and only the paint-chipped wooden horses remained intact. Looking it over his first day of ownership, Coleman shook his head in second thought and wondered: "What the hell am I going to do with it?"

What he did with it has, in the intervening 56 years, become part of American folklore.

He built himself a carnival.

Da da dum da da da dum da da da dum dum (Oh, the monkey wrapped his tail around the flag pole.) "Yassah, yassah, step right up and try your luck, a quarter to play, a quarter to win." da da dum dum. "See Florida's largest alligator, one huuundred years old, one thooousand pounds weight, 13 faaaabulous feet long." Da da dum dum. "Hey there, brother, a ride on the Paratrooper, bring your girl, watch her thrill in delight as you grab her high over the midway."

A Carnival: Baloney and Bemusement! Mischief and Magic! Rides that spin farmers 13 revolutions per minute. Ten-cent candy apples at 30 cents plus dust. Girls who wear little more than earrings and hawkers who swat flies at the cotton candy counter.

ONCE THE SHOWS were the nation's most popular form of family recreation. After folks got a load of the sword swallower with the Buffalo Bill troupe, it was an ongoing topic of village conversation — at least until the snake charmer came through with Annie Oakley.

And even today, when even the supermarket is a game of chance, when people get their thrills on the freeways, when TV and Go-Go's and college humor magazines have, presumably, lessened the lure of women in pasties, even today the carnivals thrive.

Da da dum da da da dum da da da dum dum! "I remember once I was running the Ferris Wheel and I got this big old gal who must have weighed 350 pounds. Well, when she got to the top she started to panic. She stood up and upset the balance of the wheel. I threw the damn lever into gear, but whoosh, something went wrong and the wheel went into reverse. The fat dame came down like a shot. I doubt she still ain't forgot that."

RICHARD COLEMAN keeps his trucks painted, rides in repair, heart in the right place, and eye on the business.

Financially, today's carnivals may be doing better than ever. What with fairs, shopping centers and street festivals, Irwin Kirby, editor of Amusement Business, estimates there are 600 to 1,000 shows operating in North America this year and that as many as 75 million Americans and five million Canadians will see some kind of midway attraction before the winter freeze.

Some spectators, unfortunately, will be disappointed. Many shows today are ragbags — merely a few rides and a lot of hype — and te action is chancy. Show dates are postponed or cancelled because of mechanical difficulties. Rides break down and stall for nights on end. (in some cases this is a blessing. Only 15 states have laws regulating carnival ride safety. Too often in the United States, as on Long Island recently, someone is killed on machinery that should have been condemned.)

IN MANY SMALL carnivals today the prices are high (up to 75 cents a ride) the operators sleazy, the food filthy and the midway games so hanky panky as to emit a near-smell.

Yet in the main the customers (called marks in the business) get what they pay for: illusion, escape and fatty foods.

Here in Afton the other evening, a 280-pound mechanic named Henry Walt spent $13 at the Coleman show, then said afterwards that it was "worth every penny." He won a "genuine backscratcher" in a dart game, just missing a stuffed pillow inscribed, "I Like Sex." He rode the Round Up, spent 30 minutes in a bumper car, tried the Tilt-A-Whirl and "got sick" on the 80-foot Skydive. He ate a Belly buster, an ice cream rolled in nuts, a pizza and a Mexican sandwich. It was, he concluded a hell of a night: "I wouldn't miss it. I come every year to the Afton Fair. The Coleman Bros. carnival is a big thing in my life."

Indeed, the Coleman Bros. Show — "New England's Finest" — has been a big thing in many lives for more than half a century. Begun by Richard and a now-deceased brother, the show grew from one used carousel in 1916 to 25 rides and 40 concessions today. Coleman has released ownership of the carnival to his two sons, "but I still keep an eye on it." Some eye. He's the first to rise, last to sleep — and counts the take every night.

The take for Coleman is usually good, probably because, at 81, he still insists the show go for "excellence and fairness." No crooked carneys for him, no public vulgarities. "I learned a long time ago to keep the trucks painted, the rides in good repair and my heart in the right place."

COLEMAN BOOKS 22 dates a season (April through September), all by verbal agreement. "I never cheated anybody and I never missed an opening date. I've taught my sons to do the same. This is our business and we run it as good and decent as we can."

It wasn't, of course, always thus with carnivals. Decency, perhaps, is a somewhat recent objective of the industry. Once the idea was simply to hit and run. Shows hired transvestites as "bearded ladies." The only chance in the games of chance was the chance the cops would raid. As for morals, author A. H. Lewis, in his book "Carnival," quotes one veteran show owner as musing: "Don't say nothin' bad about anybody else's wife. She may be yours next season."

And truth to tell, the contemporary carnivals have carryovers of the good old bad days. Call it institutional momentum. "It can't be wiped out completely," says a Coleman worker, "a lot of guys who were cheating 20 years ago are still around today."

ONE RAGBAG SHOW-owner in the Midwest is still reputed to make extra cash by selling the key to his wife's motel room. He sells it 10 to 15 times a night, to 10 to 15 different marks all of whom believe they have purchased exclusive rights — until they show up en masse at the door to find, to their further chagrin, the wife has, yep, checked out.

Even Coleman's show, even with the old man watching, has its duds. "A lot of us are ex-convicts," says a ride operator named French. "Myself, I was sentenced seven-and-a-half to fifteen for armed robbery. You can't get a job nowhere when you get out, but the old man takes us on. Most of us appreciate it. We'd do anything for him.

"BUT NOW AND then you get a punk. See that kid operating the Parachute? He's a punk.

He was up for child molesting. Well, one night we gave him a blanket party. You know what a blanket party is? We threw a blanket over his head and that way he couldn't prove which of us was hitting him."

Yet the dark spots of the respectable carnivals today are all but bleached out by the lights generated in the huge midway power trucks, some of which are capable of illuminating entire towns. The generators are indicative of the changed times.

Good shows today are too busy with big business to stoop very low. The Jimmy Strates show moves up and down the Eastern seaboard in private boxcars. The Royal American carnival boasts it can attract 200-250,000 people to a single extravaganza. Coleman, himself, owns one ride, an adaptation of the Ferris Wheel, which cost $100,000. "This is a million dollar operation," he says. Bums have become unwelcome and scarce.

THERE HAVE been other changes in carnivals besides scruples. Freaks, for instance, are no longer so prevalent. Coleman, who used to feature Siamese twins riding a custom built bicycle, now does entirely without such attractions. Part of the reason may be the scarcity of available freaks. "Improvements in genetic medicine," says Irwin Kirby, have cut down the number of such people. "They're harder and harder to find."

But even when they are found, the exceptional people have lost their lure. Arthur Lewis, in his book, says crowds still flock to see attractions like William Durks, a man with three eyes and two noses. But for the most part, says Coleman, "they don't go over well anymore." People are more educated," adds Coleman's son, Tody, "they don't want to walk in and gawk at somebody with snake-skin. They've too much pity."

But if the marks are avoiding one aspect of old-time midway, they are still flocking to another. Tattoo artist Louis Gatto, three decades with Coleman, says his business is good.

"It's a big fad now. Used to be I only got hard kids. Now I get everybody. Even blacks. You gotta be careful with blacks, though. The needle holes have to be real close — and you have to use heavy color." Women, too, are coming to Gatto's ancient carnival rite. "I advise them against it but what can I do?"

NOTHING. GATTO can do nothing. For there is no reasoning with the carnival marks. The prizes can be purchased cheaper in a dime store. The woman who changes into a gorilla does not really change into a gorilla. The foot-long hot dog comes up in burps for 24 hours. But the midway devotee insists on experiencing everything.

"People spend like crazy today," says Coleman, "I don't think money means a thing to them." Coleman officials estimate the average customer spends $5 a night. Some in families will shell out $50. "If you do your job right, says concessionaire Ray Griffin, "you can get them to drop a ten on one game alone."

Griffin, 35 years in the business, owns eight games and tries to do his job right. "The thing is to be enthusiastic. I started out with a woman who told me: 'Son, you won't make any money unless you hustle.' So I always hustle. I don't get tired, I don't get bored, I just hustle. I'm what we call a good agent. A bad agent is a carney who leaves his booth 20 times a day to go to the bathroom or something. There's no money in the bathroom. You gotta be out here at work."

And so most carnival people are out at work. Up to 18 hours a day for Coleman's people, seven days a week, at least 22 weeks a year.

And right in the middle is the old man himself.

Fifty-six years later.

"Watching people have fun."

You know, Coleman says, pointng to his Skydive, "they said TV would kill the carnival. The hell is has. Ain't no way yet for anybody to ride a damn screen 80 foot high in the air."

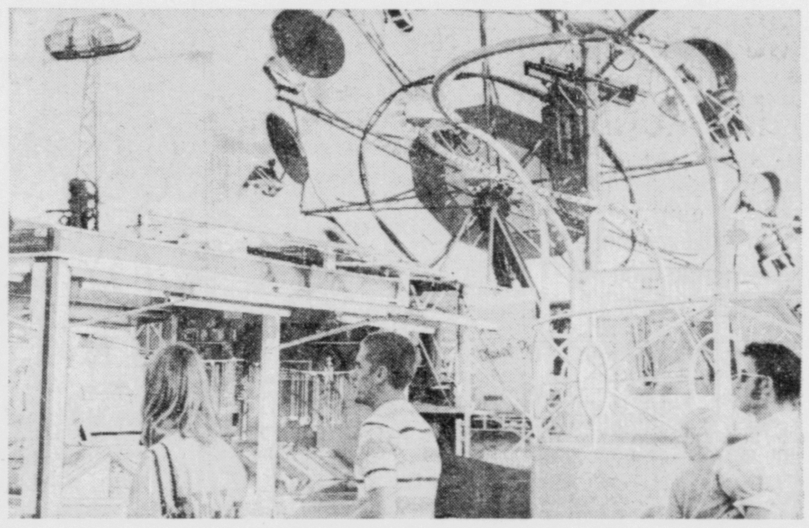
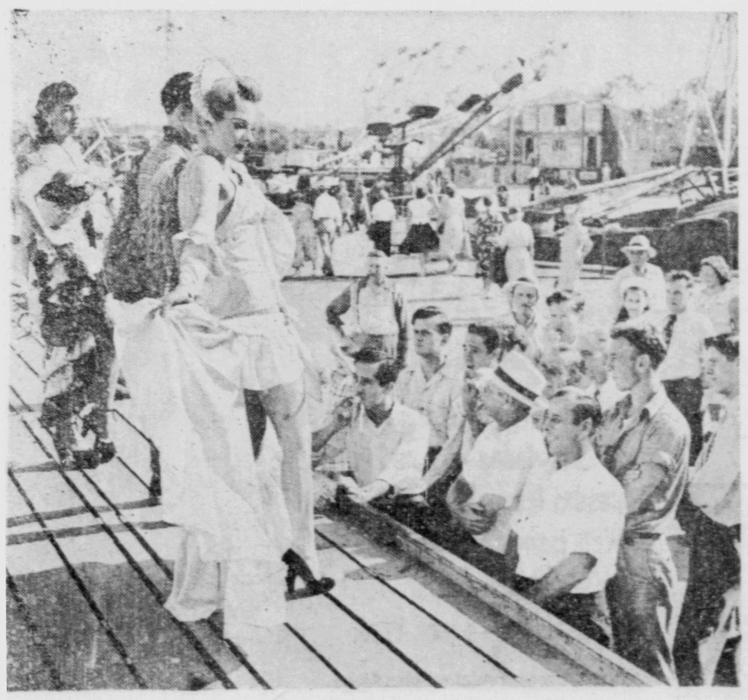
Carnival skyline

Today (right) as yesterday (below) is dominated by high-flying rides. And there are still ladies in pasties to attract the marks. But there have been changes. Medical progress, for one thing, has made freaks harder to find.





What's a carnival without cotton candy?
